Commerce Aide Gave Her Secrets During War, Former Red Spy Says

Congress Scheduled To Quit by August 14

Some Credit Curbs To Be Put Through, Taft Says During Lively Senate Clash

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Congress yesterday closed shop for the week with a zero score on the President's "emergency" program and promised to adjourn for keeps by August 14 with only a fraction of it touched.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) set two weeks from today as the outside boundary of the special session during a lively Senate clash between Republican and Democratic leaders.

"I hope we might well be finished by the end of next week, if the committees do their job in time," Taft told the Senate.

"If they do not get through that soon, we shall have to stay another week; but certainly I would hope that the 14th of August would be the limit of this session of Congress."

To Push Some Credit Curbs

In his blistering Senate speech, directed mainly at the President's anti-inflation program, Taft tipped GOP leadership plans to this extent:

1. Indicated only bank and possibly consumer credit curbs proposed by the President will be pushed through Congress. The President's other anti-inflation proposals would be sidetracked.

2. Opposed for the first time congressional passage during the special session of his own Senate-approved Taft-Ellender-Wagner long-range housing bill. Taft used the President's economic report as a springboard for his argument that the bill would be inflationary at this time, but promised to plug for action next session.

3. Proposed the Senate "dispose" of the Senate filibuster against a motion to call up the anti-poll-tax bill by next Wednesday and spend the balance of the session on the green-lighted fraction of Mr. Truman's program.

Coast Through Second Day

The Southerners, meanwhile, coasted through their second day of debate with only two speakers—Senators Tom Stewart (D., Tenn.) and Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.).

The two-hour nonsectional squabble over the President's Economic Report gave them an unexpected rest. And a 5:30 p. m. Senate recess until Monday noon left them the whole weekend for a battery recharge.

From Senator Wayne L. Morse (R., Oreg.) they received their only

Elizabeth's Baby Expected Oct. 15; Twins Ruled Out

London, July 30 (U.P.).—Princess Elizabeth's physicians have fixed October 15 as the day they believe the new heir, or heiress, to the British throne will be born. X-rays have shown there is no likelihood of twins.

Friends say King George VI is hoping for a grandson, but Elizabeth has no preference.

It's my baby—that's all that matters. I'll love it just as much if it's a girl," friends quote Elizabeth as saying.

Sunday: A Gallup Poll On Truman, Dewey and Wallace

It's only three months until Election Day—and time for another of the Gallup Poll's revealing "trial heats." In the first one since the nominations, Gallup tells you tomorrow how Truman, Dewey and Wallace now stand with American voters.

Has the President regained the ground he lost during the spring? Does the Dewey-Warren ticket find wide acceptance? Is the Progressive Party winning or losing support? Find out from Sunday's Gallup Poll, exclusively in The Washington Post.

Truman Again Urges Action To Prevent 'Business Collapse'

Eccles Criticizes Credit Curb Proposal Advanced by Truman

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Part of President Truman's anti-inflation program, which he submitted to Congress Tuesday, got a blast of criticism from within his own Administration yesterday.

Marriner S. Eccles, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, told the Senate Banking Committee Mr. Truman's plan for restricting bank credit was worse than no legislation at all.

He declared that Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, who had testified just before him that the proposal to increase reserve requirements of member banks of the Federal Reserve System was drafted by the Reserve Board, was mistaken.

The board, he said, had just recently unanimously agreed that if reserve requirements of banks were increased, the law should apply to all commercial banks, whether members or nonmembers of the reserve system.

He read from Thursday's testimony by Thomas B. McCabe, who

Dangers Disregarded, He Charges in Demand With Economic Report

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday called again for action to "forestall business collapse" from a Congress openly hostile to his announced program for halting inflation.

His demand, included in his Midyear Economic Report, was accompanied by a charge that "we have shown a blind disregard of the dangers that beset our path." And he added:

"The failure to control inflation effectively in the past makes it increasingly urgent that we adopt and apply vigorous measures to guide us safely from the uneven

2 Candidates See Air Show In N. Y. Today

Truman, Dewey to Fly To 'Biggest' Display At Idlewild Field

New York, July 30 (AP).—President Truman and his Republican White House rival, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, will see the Nation's greatest peacetime display of air power together Saturday.

The mighty show will follow the President's dedication of another study in superlatives—the huge New York International Airport at Idlewild on Long Island's south shore.

The Air Force and Navy are assembling 850 of their newest and most lethal planes for the display. Some will fly from as far away as Spokane, Wash.

The first craft are scheduled to wing in from the Atlantic over Idlewild at precisely 2 p. m. (EST). They will be F-80s, flashing jets which now equip some of the Air Force's fighter wings.

After them will come literally millions of horsepower in jet and piston engines. The review is to be finished in less than an hour.

The appearance of Mr. Truman and Governor Dewey on the same platform for the dedication ceremonies will itself write a new chapter in modern American political history.

No Precedent Found

Records disclose no previous instance in which the opposing presidential candidates of the major parties attended a public function together and spoke from the same rostrum.

Both men will make only brief talks. The speeches are to be broadcast over all four major networks, starting at 1:30 p. m. (EST).

Politics is to be put aside for the occasion. But the reception accorded the presidential nominees and their greetings to each other will attract wide interest.

Three Records Fall, One Tied In Olympics

Americans Fail to Win First Place in Opening Competition

London, July 30 (U.P.).—Three Olympic records fell today and another was tied before the inspired onslaughts of the world's greatest athletes as the fourteenth modern Olympiad gained full momentum. The heavily-favored United States team dominated many preliminaries but was shut out in all three final events of the day.

Flags of three other nations—Czechoslovakia, Australia and France—fluttered from the victor's staff on this first day of major Olympic competition in 12 years. The best the Yanks could do was a disappointing third in the high jump. Dwight Eddelman of Illinois and George Stanich of UCLA tied for third with leaps of 6 feet 4¾ inches.

While gold medals eluded the United States, competitors wearing the American Olympic shield laid the groundwork for future victories by scoring heavily in qualifying heats for the 100-meter dash, 400-meter hurdles, 800-meter run, men's diving, and men's 100-meter free-style swimming.

Greatest ovation from the 70,000 spectators jammed into Wembley Stadium burst forth for Emil Zatopek, 25-year-old Czech army lieutenant, who nearly lapped the field in winning the 10,000-meter run in Olympic record time of 29:59.6.

First gold medal winner to mount the podium was a Frenchwoman, M. O. M. Ostermeyer, who won the women's discus with a toss of 137 feet 6½ inches. Then came J. L. Winter of Australia, surprise winner of the high jump at 6 feet 6 inches, and finally Zatopek.

Rune Larsson of Sweden clipped a tenth of a second off the Olympic 400-meter hurdle record with a second-round heat clocking of 51.9 seconds and a few moments later Roy Cochran of Los Angeles, former indoor quarter-mile record holder, tied his brand-new record.

Tildy Quits Hungary's Presidency

Steps Out Under Red Pressure Soon After Arrest of Son-in-Law On Traitor Charge

Budapest, Hungary, July 30 (U.P.).—President Zoltan Tildy resigned today under pressure from the Communist-dominated government. Political observers predicted it was the beginning of a renewed Communist drive against Tildy's Smallholders' Party.

Tildy quit soon after his son-in-law, Victor Csornoky, was charged with being a traitor and a spy.

An official communique said the President had "no political reasons for taking this step . . . a member of his family turned against the democratic order, after which he could not expect that the Hungarian nation could give him the full confidence which he would deserve in this high position."

Plans to Stay in Hungary

(Talking by telephone with the Prague bureau of the United Press, Tildy said he planned to remain in Hungary, but did not know whether he would be active in politics.

(Asked about the reason for his resignation and about his son-in-law's arrest, Tildy would say only "Listen to the Hungarian radio tonight.")

Parliament will meet Monday to choose a new President. Leading candidates include Imre Nagy, Communist speaker of the chamber; Gyulz Szekfu, Ambassador to Moscow; Count Michael Karolyi, who was Hungary's first President after World War I, and Arpad Szakasits, a pro-Communist Socialist.

Csornoky, a former first secretary of the Hungarian Legation in Washington, resigned yesterday as Minister to Cairo. The communique announcing his arrest said he had been seized by the Communist-led political police and "charged with treason and espionage."

Swindle Alleged

Unofficial Communist sources said Csornoky had been mixed up in the political side of the alleged one-million-dollar "swindle" by Smallholder officials in the Agriculture Ministry. Fifty-five persons were arrested last week in connection with the ministry "plot."

The unofficial sources said Csornoky's part of the "swindle" involved contact "with a foreign power." Other sources hinted that he had attempted to smuggle the family fortune to Switzerland.

The President's son-in-law had reportedly been jailed, but his whereabouts were unknown.

Observers predicted a big gov-

AT SENATE QUIZ—Miss Elizabeth T. Bentley told a Senate investigating subcommittee yesterday that, as a one-time "Communist-at-large", she gathered military information from U. S. Government sources—including the Army Air Forces—for a Russian agency in this country

Another of Those in Ring Was on White House Office Staff in 1944, She Testifies; Lists Government Sources

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The furtive operations of a Communist spy ring stretching from Washington to Moscow were described to a Senate committee yesterday by a self-confessed former key figure in the espionage net.

Miss Elizabeth Terrill Bentley, a dark-haired Vassar graduate, class of 1930, told the Senate Investigating Committee she had about 20 direct and 30 more indirect contacts among Government employes in Washington during the war.

One, she said, worked in the executive office of the President in 1944.

The Russians to whom she reported, she testified, became much excited when she passed on information from the White House contact that this Nation was on the verge of breaking one of Russia's codes.

Names One Employe

Only Government employe the committee permitted her to name was William Remington, director of the Export Programs Staff of the Commerce Department.

Remington, she said, was in the War Production Board during the war and passed along the secret figures on American aircraft production, and also a secret formula on the making of synthetic rubber.

He and his wife, she testified, were members of the Communist Party. She said she collected Communist Party dues from them and delivered Communist literature to them.

Before Miss Bentley took the stand the committee called Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr., Acting Assistant Secretary of Commerce, to explain how it was that Remington was given an important Commerce job in March, 1948, despite the fact that the FBI and the Justice Department had known of his affiliations for a year.

Is Now on Vacation

Blaisdell said Remington had been doing "highly secret" work for his department, although there was some question about his affiliation with Communist front organizations. Blaisdell said he liked Remington, who is now, he declared, on vacation.

Last night Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer said he had placed Remington on "indefinite leave" in the latter part of June after reading a report, in the hands of the Civil Service Commission, on the investigation into Remington's background.

Remington, it was disclosed, is now chairman of the "adhoc" committee of the Commerce Department, which deals in confidential information concerning this country's requirements for atomic energy, military and naval materials.

Commerce Department officials said he has also been working recently with an interagency committee that determines what goods may be exported to Russia.

Chairman Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) of the investigating subcommittee said Remington would be given "his day in court" today and summoned a committee hearing for 10 a. m.

The committee, Ferguson said, was not trying to pass on Remington's loyalty but rather to determine the degree of efficiency of loyalty tests when despite the information available to FBI and Justice he was given a confidential post at Commerce.

Miss Bentley told the committee that toward the end of her association with Remington he was

WILLIAM W. REMINGTON
At Press Conference Last Night

William W. Remington, director of the Export program staff, Commerce Department, last night denied he was or ever had been a member of the Communist Party or a Communist sympathizer.

The 30-year-old Government economist, however, commended the work of his accuser, Miss Elizabeth T. Bentley, attractive self-confessed former Russian spy. He termed her testimony to the Senate subcommittee and to the Federal Bureau of Investgation "invaluable" and said she should receive the highest commendation within the power of this Government to bestow.

She was confused about him, he said, either because of faulty recollection or because her own Communist masters had purposely misled her but he said in general he felt her testimony about the espionage network in the United States Government to be accurate, careful, and extremely valuable.

Committee Fair, He Says

Neither, he said, did he feel any criticism of the Senate subcommittee. The committee, he told reporters in an extraordinary press conference at the Willard Hotel, was being fair. He said he believed it would continue being fair. He would like, he declared, a little more time to document his own answers.

Remington said that one reason

Danube Parley Red Bloc Deals Blow to West

English Is Rejected By 7 to 3 as Official Conference Language

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, July 30 (AP).—Eastern Europe's Communist bloc dealt a sharp blow tonight to the prestige of the western powers by rejecting their demand for the inclusion of English among the official languages of the Danube River Conference.

The action came on a vote of seven to three after a three-hour, one-way floor fight during which Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky chided Britain and the United States for being touchy on the subject.

France and Britain voted with the United States; Yugoslavia voted with Russia.

As a result, the official record and decisions of the conference, which opened today, will be transcribed only in Russian and French.

West May Try To See Stalin On Blockade

Molotov Unavailable, Possibility Arises of Parley With Premier

By The Associated Press

The United States, Britain and France may seek to carry direct to Premier Stalin their new joint request for an end to the Soviet blockade of Berlin.

This possibility arose after the State Department received word yesterday from American Ambassador W. B. Smith in Moscow that Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov is away from his office "on vacation."

Smith has just returned to Moscow from conferences in Berlin and London. He and British and French envoys had proposed to see Molotov immediately.

Some officials here suggested the Soviet government may have preferred that Molotov be unavailable.

Action May Await Return of Molotov

Moscow, July 30 (NYHT).—Action on the plan of the three western powers to propose to the Soviet Union a discussion of the Berlin situation and of the entire German problem will be held in abeyance until Soviet Foreign Minister Viacheslav M. Molotov returns here, it appeared today.

The heads of the three western missions will have to decide whether to await Molotov's return or proceed with Deputy Foreign

Towering Long Island Pile

First Atom Electric Plant To Start Work in December

Upton, N. Y., July 30 (AP).—The first atomic plant able to make electric power—probably 2500 kilowatts, enough for a small village—is to start here in December, it was announced today.

This is the pile of the Brookhaven national laboratory of the Atomic Energy Commission, a huge, yellow brick, cube-shaped, single room, rising out of a Long Island forest, and towering above big sand hills. The building is six to seven stories high, its sides 120 feet by 100.

It has perhaps the biggest bay window in the world—five to six stories high—out of which will shoot a giant beam of neutrons that will travel more than half a mile in the air, just grazing the hilltops and the north edge of the Brookhaven laboratory, which is itself the size of a small town.

The pile is in three huge, separate parts. They stand in a row, their lower ends behind a great rampart of sand, a natural ridge formed by an ancient dune.

At one end is the cube-shaped pile. At the other is the stack to carry fumes away from the pile. This stack is bigger around than a lighthouse and will rise 300 feet. Between is a big factory-shaped building for doing many accessory jobs. This building probably will use the pile's electric power.

The pile itself, behind brick walls and corrugated sheet metal lining those walls, is a great cube of concrete. It has holes in the sides, top and bottom, all for letting out radioactive rays, or for putting inside materials that in from a few seconds to a few months will be made radioactive.

The heart of the pile is inside this concrete fortress, which is merely a shield against rays.

The heart is made of pure graphite and uranium rods. The graphite is laid in bricks, each nearly half as long as a man's leg. These bricks are machined with the precision of a rifle bore.

The stack is far away from the pile for safety purposes. Up the stack will go the radioactive air which has circulated through the pile to keep it cool. The stack will eliminate all dangerous elements, except argon, the gas used to make the blue color of neon lights. Argon emits mean rays, but they are mostly gone in two to four hours. At 300 feet they are expected to die before they can settle to the ground, except in damp water. A 300-foot weather tower a mile away will enable weathermen on duty 24 hours of the day to tell when dampness brings downdrafts. A word from them will shut down the pile.

The air in this region will be kept as free from radioactivity as is that of Denver, which at one mile altitude gets a little more radioactivity from cosmic rays than does sea-level Long Island.

A common barb-wire fence warns all comers that the pile area is secret. It bears this sign:

Bar Unit Urges Felony Court On 24-Hour, 7-Day Schedule

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Court processes should be "available night and day, seven days a week," to persons arrested for suspected felonies, said the District Bar Association's civil rights committee in a report released yesterday.

The committee recommended by a vote of 7 to 3 to amend the District Code so that all persons arrested on such grounds shall be taken "forthwith" before a Municipal Court judge or a United States commissioner.

The hearing officer thereupon will issue a warrant, discharge the suspect, or continue the matter for no more than 24 hours, to permit further investigation. If the case is so continued, the suspect should be held in a place "other than a police station," with full rights to communicate with counsel, friends or relatives, the bar group said.

These proposals, reported in the August journal of the Bar Association, are among recommended solutions to police practices of holding persons indefinitely "for investigation," disclosed in a survey made last fall by The Washington Post.

The Washington Post found that 900 arrests "for investigation" were made between October 1 and November 1, excluding 300 arrests later changed to arrests for specific crimes.

Of the 900 arrests, 126 were for more than 24 hours, and 679 for an indeterminate period. Last January, the civil rights committee by a vote of 6-4, called for an end to such practices, and urged study of possible new legislation to outlaw them.

The current report is the result,

'Unusually Healthy'

Man in Total Coma 2000 Days From Head Blow Sets Record

Cincinnati, July 30 (AP).—Patient "X," a former electrical engineer, was in his 2001st day of total coma at Bethesda Hospital today.

The period of unconsciousness is the longest known in medical history, his physicians say.

The man was 50 years old when he was struck on the head by a pulley on February 5, 1943, at the Wright Aeronautical Corp.

His physicians said Patient "X" was struck on the right, frontal region of his head, cutting his right eyebrow.

Although conscious when he arrived at the hospital, Patient "X" rapidly lost consciousness shortly afterward because of a blood clot, one of the doctors said.

The clot accumulated so rapidly that circulatory changes released the centers in the brain that activate standing.

The patient became rigid. The clot affected cells which govern level of consciousness.

"Consequently, he now exists at a low order of nervous activity without obvious mentation," doctors said.

The blood clot was removed through a delicate operation but highly specialized brain cells already had been destroyed.

Patient "X" is "unusually healthy," the physicians say. He is tube fed through the nose.

His hair continues to grow, he has aged little, his finger and toenails grow normally and his teeth are good, the doctors said.

His eyes will follow objects but if the doctors ask him to blink or move a finger if he knows they are talking to him, he shows no signs of comprehension.

Patient "X" has cost the industrial commission of Ohio $63,026.42 to date in workmen's compensation.

He has a wife and two sons.

Doctors said he may live an unusually long time but that "only a miracle could change his condition."

Tito-Cominform Dispute Splits Yugoslavs in U. S.

Lake Success, N. Y., July 30 (U.P.).—A serious split has taken place among Yugoslav officials in this country over the Cominform's denunciation of Marshal Tito. Five Yugoslav officials have denounced the marshal, it was disclosed tonight.

Dr. Joza Vilfan, chief Yugoslav delegate to the United Nations and a loyal supporter of Tito, disclosed that five of his country's representatives, some in the U. N. and others at the Yugoslav Embassy at Washington, had signed a strong statement denouncing the marshal's regime.

What the statement said and who the officials were, Vilfan would not reveal. He refused to say whether action had been taken against the Cominform supporters.

He described the officials as being "lesser ones."

Commerce Official Called Spy Contact

very unhappy, uneasy and reluctant to give her information.

As for obtaining information from Government departments, she said, it was easier to say from which departments she could not obtain information than to list those from which she could.

It was impossible to get anything out of the Federal Bureau of Investigation or the Navy, she said. The Army and, particularly, the Air Forces, she said were a different matter.

Military information from the Air Forces and the Army went right to Russian agents in New York.

She named specifically the Treasury as an excellent source of information—the one place from which a few crumbs of Navy information occasionally leaked. She also named the State Department, the OSS, the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, the War Production Board, and the War Manpower Commission as furnishing contacts for her Russian bosses.

For herself, Miss Bentley said, she was drawn into the espionage net through her love for Jacob Golos, late chairman of the central control committee of the Communist Party, who died in 1943.

Golos was indicted and convicted, she said, of being an unregistered agent of a foreign power but he was given a suspended sentence.

He was her original boss in the spy ring, she said. Then after he died, a mysterious Russian whom she knew only as "Bill" and later one she knew as "Jack" took his place. She reported to them on New York street corners, in restaurants, etc.

Soviet First Secretary

Sometimes, she said, she reported the information she gathered on Washington street corners —once at 14th and E nw.—and in various hideouts to a man named "Al" who she later learned was the First Secretary of the Soviet Embassy in the United States.

After the death of Golos, she declared, she gradually became more and more uneasy and worried about what she was doing.

Finally, she said, she went to the office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in New Haven, Conn., and told all that she knew.

Political and Military

Miss Bentley testified the information she gathered was of two different classifications—political and military.

The political information, she said, went straight to Earl Browder, then head of the Communist Party, while the military information was turned over directly to the Russians for transmission to Moscow.

Usually, she said, the information from her direct contacts was so voluminous it had to be carried in a knitting bag or shopping bag.

That from the indirect contacts, she declared, frequently had to be microfilmed before she took it to New York.

When she got down to naming people, Miss Bentley identified a former secretary to Columnist Walter Lippmann as a Communist agent who stole information from his office.

She gave the woman's name as Mary Watkins Price.

Senator Hoey (D., N. C.) said Mary Watkins Price is now head of Henry A. Wallace's Progressive Party in North Carolina.

"Oh, my," exclaimed Miss Bentley, "she certainly has gone up in the world."

Under questioning by Hoey, Miss Bentley said she met Miss Price at a restaurant in New York City, on Fifth avenue, in February, 1941.

"Was she a Communist? asked Hoey.

"She was introduced as such," Miss Bentley said.

She said Miss Price left Lippmann's employ in May, 1943.

Ferguson said: "There is no intimation that Mr. Lippmann was connected in any way with the Communists?"

"Oh, no," said Miss Bentley.

"She was keeping it secret from him and delivering it—(information)—to you?"

"Yes. He had a great deal of information on the United States' relations with the British and what we planned to do in the future. It was very interesting."

Went Through Files

Miss Bentley said she and Miss Price went through Lippmann's files while he was out of the city and "we spent a weekend copying" information.

"Then she was up to date," Miss Bentley said, "so she could keep up with the files herself."

Walter Lippmann said of the testimony last night:

"It is news to me, if it is true."

His office confirmed that a Mary Watkins Price had been employed by him.

Miss Bentley is the woman who is reported to have helped the Government work up the evidence which led to indictment of 12 Communist leaders in New York last week on charges of advocating the overthrow of the Government by violence.

It was a tale resembling in many respects the accounts of the Canadian spy trials that Miss Bentley unfolded before the committee.

The gently reared Vassar graduate said she became interested in Socialism in college. She taught briefly, she said, at Foxcroft School in Virginia.

Learned to Hate Fascism

She studied in Florence, Italy, she said, and there learned to hate Fascism and the Fascists. She said she took her master's degree at Columbia University.

There she first joined the American League against War and Fascism, a Communist front which becme the American League for Peace and Democracy, then the Emergency Peace Mobilization, and then the American Peace Mobilization. The last organization, after Russia was atacked by Hitler, becme the American People's Mobilization. Its latest disguise is the Win the Peace movement, which has been quiescent since the starting of the Progressive Party.

At Columbia, she said, she joined Unit One, of the Harlem Section, Communist Party.

Then, she said, in 1938 at the request of the party she went "underground" and became a Communist Party member at large which meant she no longer carried a card or attended meetings. She was then to report to only one man—her then boss, and the man she loved, Jacob Golos. He was Russian-born, she said, but an American citizen.

She was then working in the Italian Library of Information, part of the Italian propaganda effort in this country.

Turned Over to Golos

Out of the files and contacts with that agency she said she gained as much information as she could of the plans of the Fascists and turned it over to Golos.

He wanted information on the nationalists in Spain, on anti-Semitic movements sparked by the Nazis and so forth. She said she also received mail at her home for Golos. It was from Canada and Mexico, she said. She added that Mexican mail stopped after Leon Trotsky's chauffeur was shot in Mexico.

Subcommittee Chairman Ferguson asked if she knew why the mail from Mexico stopped.

"Why the person who was writing letters to Golos from Mexico was one of the men who shot Trotsky's chauffeur," she declared.

Just Follow Orders

She didn't make any inquiries about her work, she said, because "the Communist Party is run like an army—you follow orders and you don't ask questions."

Then she had to do research at libraries for Golos, she declared. She reported on the Finnish Relief Committee.

She also investigated, as far as she was able, she said, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, President Roosevelt and various Cabinet members. Golos, she declared, wanted every scrap of information which would indicate how a man in public life felt toward Russia.

Golos, she said, was president of World Tourists, Inc., a profitable travel agency encouraged by Soviet Russia. After Golos was convicted in 1940 of failure to register as a foreign agent he got an outwardly "impeccable" businessman to act as front for a new outfit, the United Sstates Service and Shipping Corp., and made her vice president and secretary.

Went to $800 a Month

She actually ran the show, she said, and went up in salary from $200 a month in 1945 to $800 a month in 1946.

Gradually Golos began to turn over to her, she said, confidential errands, including the eliciting of information from Communist Party members and sympathizers.

Most of these, she said, worked for this government.

All of the meetings she held with these people, she declared, were very, very secret. They were held either on street corners or in restaurants, never in Government departments.

Golos told her, she said, of the contact in the White House. He asked her to see what could be done to have Communists in inactive agencies transferred to places where they could obtain confidential information.

The contact in the White House helped, she declared.

Couldn't Figure Motives

Ferguson demanded to know what would make a man in the White House itself give such highly secret information. Was he a Communist Party member, she was asked.

"I don't think so," she said. "We never were able to figure out just what his motives were." She added that she understands he's no longer with the Government.

These people weren't being paid for information, she told the committee. "They were just a bunch of misguided idealists."

What sickened her after the death of Golos, she declared, was the attitude of the Russian agents who succeeded him and tried to pay her for work she was doing out of idealism. She also, she said, became frightened when they suggested she should go to Russia "for training" in 1945.

Offered Fur Coat, Extras

The Russian agents, she said, offered her a fur coat, air-conditioning equipment for her apartment and a regular monthly stipend. First it was $50 and then they raised the ante, she said.

She would collect Communist Party dues and deliver Communist literature when she came to Washington to get her reports from Government workers, she said. Generally she made the rounds here twice a week, she told the committee.

She had to deliver the literature, she said, because the only other place they could get it was the Washington Bookshop and they were afraid to go there because by this time it had been recognized as a Communist front.

It was in December, 1944, she said that "Al," the first secretary of the Russian Embassy, "put me on ice." In Communist Party terms this means, she said, to stop all activities because the "heat" is on and there might be leaks. Golos had died a year before in November, 1943 but the Russians told her they still feared she might be watched because of him.

She knew, she said, there were at least two other agents beside herself running espionage rings, how many more there might be, she declared, she did not know.

The Government employes who were active in the Communist Party, she said, were loyal only to the international Communist movement. They were loyal to Russia as the leader of that movement, she said.

They looked upon this Government as "very bad—something like the Nazi government—a repressive government they wanted to get rid of."

Remington she met at corners like 14th and E, 4th and, Pennsylvania and 4th, in a little park and at the Mellon Art Gallery.

She denied that she had ever made collections from Remington for the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee or that he could ever have considered her a reporter.

Called to Explain In Spy Inquiry

the committee was—"very properly" looking into his record is that he appears to be the only one left in Government to whom Miss Bentley talked.

Even though he has suffered from the inquiry, so far, he said, it is obvious that this democracy must take steps to protect itself from the enemies within who would destroy it.

The handsome, blond young man told reporters he had certainly been "gullible" but just the same he had never given Miss Bentley one single scrap of confidential information.

He touched the outside edges of the Communist spy ring, he said, only because he was introduced to its members by his former mother-in-law, Elizabeth Moos of Croton-on-Hudson, N. Y.

He said he termed her his former mother-in-law because he and his wife, Ann, are now separated.

His mother-in-law, who he said prefers to be known as Miss Moos, was associated for years with the American Council for Soviet Friendship. Remington said she was associated with many front organizations.

Her best friend, he declared, was Joseph North, then editor of the New Masses, generally recognized as a Communist publication.

It was North, he said, who introduced him and his wife to the man he knew as John Golos, who was described by Miss Bentley as Jacob Golos, head of her spy ring and the man she loved.

North introduced Golos, he said, as a writer and Miss Bentley as Golos' assistant, a Miss Helen Johnson.

He did not dispute Miss Bentley's testimony, he said, that he had seen her several times in Washington—probably 10 times in 1942-1943.

He said he gave Miss Bentley only those figures on United States aircraft production available to any reporter who asked for it. He was a little flattered, thinking her a reporter, he declared, when she would call him up and ask him to meet her.

But, he said, he began to be suspicious of her in 1943. She asked "too many indiscreet questions."

It is true he paid her money, he declared. He turned over what he believed to be contributions to the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee amounting to possibly $30 in all. Golos, he said had asked him for this contribution, and told him Miss "Johnson" would collect.

It was entirely possible Miss Bentley herself thought these were Communist party dues, he declared, if her Communist party bosses wanted to have her believe there were more Communists in Government circles than there actually were.

Miss "Johnson"-Bentley, he told reporters, always referred to the money as contributions.

As for his record, Remington declared, it was consistently anti-Communist.

1. He and his wife ware booted out of the Emergency Peace Mobilization, later the Communist-controlled American Peace Mobilization, in September, 1940 because he supported aid to Engliad. The Soviets at that time had a non-aggression pact with Germany.

2. He sympathized with Finland in the Russo-Finnish war.

3. He vigorously opposed the Morgenthau plan to reduce Germany to the status of a pastoral country.

4. Still later he aided in drawing up plans for the European Recovery Program.

He said his opposition to the Morgenthau plan is on file with the Council of Economic Ministers in London. He was assigned there after he was commissioned an ensign in the Navy in September, 1944. He took note of Miss Bentley's testimony that no information ever leaked out of the Navy. He said he was in naval intelligence assigned to language duties.

In the Department of Commerce, he said, he is well-known for his insistence upon defense measures against the Soviet bloc.

Congress Plans to Adjourn By August 14 With Little Done

rude talk. Morse suggested the Senate stay in continuous session 24 hours a day next week and called fillibusters a threat to majority rule.

Galleries Cheer Tobey

Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) got cheers from the galleries by condemning "political bickering and jockeying for position" on both sides of the aisle.

Tobey read a letter from a constituent asking "constructive" action now and said:

"The American people are wondering whether the two great political parties give a damn about them, except to get their votes."

What touched off the debate was Taft's report to the Senate on the President's midyear economic report.

The Ohioan helped pull the rug out from under the already disappearing chance of House passage of long-range housing this session by using the report as his text.

He called attention to these lines in the report: "Residential construction is expected to increase the total supply of dewlling units by more than a million during 1948. This high output has been accompanied by an increase in costs that is outrunning consumers' ability to pay for the housing they need."

Taft said this meant that more legislative stimulus to construction this year would further increase costs and "only add to the very serious inflation."

He concluded that House action on the T-E-W bill "should await the regular session." He said he was "fully borne out by the report of the President itself, and it entirely removes the housing question from the emergency status."

Income Outdistanced

Senator Myers remarked that the report also showed a 20 per cent rise in the cost of new houses compared with an increase of only 8 per cent in average family income. He asked if that didn't demonstrate the necessity of anti-inflation action.

Taft agreed the price question is an "emergency matter," said House and Senate Banking Committees are "examining" it, but charged Mr. Truman is not using inflation control powers he now has because "he does not want to stop inflation."

Myers asked Taft to name the powers the President now has "rather than making political speeches . . ."

The GOP steersman said he could control inflation by limitation of bank credit and possibly "by raising the rediscount rate and refusing to buy all the Government bonds. . ."

Barkley Disagrees

Senator Barkley replied that the President cannot prevent a bank from lending money to a prospective borrower or "lobby" with the Federal Reserve Board.

"The President in an emergency can say to the board 'It is necessary to prevent inflation,'" said Taft. "He would be more able to influence the board by a sound argument than by asking for powers which he knows no sensible Congress would ever grant him."

Then Taft and O'Mahoney got in an argument over whether Taft said or didn't say the board should abandon support of Government bonds. Taft said he didn't say it or take a position either way, but would prefer that to "placing price controls on the American people."

O'Mahoney asked if Taft sought House approval of Senate-passed legislation giving the President consumer credit controls. Taft said he would like to see it pass, but argued Mr. Truman can control consumer credit now by declaring an emergency under the Trading With the Enemy Act.

The Ohioan recalled that President Roosevelt closed the banks in 1933 under authority of that act.

"There was an emergency which was brought about by the unsound policies of the Republican Party," said O'Mahoney, "policies which are again being adopted and which if they are not stopped will bring about closing of the banks again."

"I do not think the banks of the country need be alarmed by the Senator's threats," said Taft. "I am quite sure they will not be closed again."

"I make no threats," said O'Mahoney.

Important to Find Out

Senator Lucas asked if Taft knew what Gov. Thomas E. Dewey thinks Congress should do about the high cost of living and housing. Taft said he had no information and Lucas snapped that it was "important to find out" before Congress adjourns.

Senator Barkley followed up Lucas' tack and Taft said Dewey's only statement was the one New York's Governor authorized to the press, "that in his opinion Congress should not adjourn last Wednesday, but should give consideration to the President's proposals as we are doing."

Barkley next ripped into Taft's use of the President's report against action on the T-E-W bill Taft himself sponsored.

Taft said he had urged the House to act on long range housing "but I think their attitude is exactly what it was before that they do not agree with the bill." He said he will urge action next session "with all the force at my command" but again said the President's report "shows very clearly" it is not now an emergency question.

It was Taft's turn at Barkley. He quoted to the Senate from Barkley's speech a month ago opposing a postconvention session of Congress because it would result in partisan recriminations.

Barkley said he didn't "retract" what he said, but felt the President should be commended for calling Congress back and challenging it to lift inflation and other issues "out of the realm of political controversy."

The Kentuckian denied Taft's charge that Mr. Truman is "playing politics" but said:

"If we admit for the sake of argument that it is true, the Republicans of this Congress can play even smarter politics by carrying out his recommendations and placing the appropriate laws on the statute books."

Special Session Scorecard

Following is the Congressional scoresheet on the President's 11-point program after the fifth day of the special session:

1. Control inflation. No action.
2. Low cost-housing. Senate bills introduced Wednesday, no action.
3. Federal aid to education. No House action on Senate-passed bill.
4. Increase Social Security benefits. No action.
5. Amend Displaced Persons Act. Senate bills introduced Wednesday, no action.
6. Loan to build U. N. headquarters. No House action on bill passed by the Senate and approved by House Foreign Affairs Committee.
7. Ratify international wheat agreement. Senate hearing slated Monday.
8. Funds for TVA steam plant. Bills introduced Wednesday, no action.
9. Raise Federal pay. No action.
10. Civil Rights program. Senate motion of Thursday to call up House-passed antipoll tax bill still under filibuster.
11. Increase minimum wage level. Administration bill introduced Thursday, House and Senate hearings under way. No House committee action on Senate-passed bill. Petition drive jeopardized by proposed quick adjournment. No action.

Board Raises Center Rates

The Board of Public Welfare yesterday announced immediate increases in charges at its Child Day Care Centers.

The new rates range from $2 a week per child of parents with incomes up to $1600 a year to $7 for a school-age child whose parents' income is within the $2900 to $3200 pay bracket. The increases range from 50 cents to $2 a week.

Members of the board also voted that inmates of private homes for the aged or the blind who are not receiving public assistance are not eligible for public assistance grants now merely because living costs have advanced.

The policy was laid down, according to Welfare Director John W. Tramburg, in the face of "numerous" requests for acceptance of such residents on District public assistance rolls. Applications, it was said, were direct results of reduced allotments to the private asylums by Community Chest funds.

Tramburg said the private organizations contracted to care for their inmates either by written or implied contracts for life.

Sawyer Tells Of Remington Suspension

Text of a statement issued by Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer on the suspension of William Remington, a department employe:

I inherited from my predecessor and feel that I have in the Department of Commerce a body of loyal and competent employes. However the loyalty board of the department is making continuing investigations. If I find a Communist or Communist-sympathizer in the department I shall discharge him or her immediately. I, more than any other person, wish to be certain of the loyalty of everyone in this department. No disloyal employe should be retained and no loyal employe should be stained with the charge of disloyalty until it is clear that the charge is justified.

Shortly after I came to the department two months ago, I was told that William W. Remington was under investigation by the FBI. At that time I examined the employment files of the department with reference to Mr. Remington but found nothing therein indicating the slightest ground for any suspicion as to his loyalty. However, I made repeated inquiries as to when the report was to come in, and on June 15 was told that the report had been delivered to the Civil Service Commission. I asked immediately for the opportunity of reviewing this report. Over the weekend of June 19 it was reviewed by the counsel for the department and early the following week it was reviewed by me. I returned the report immediately thereafter to the Civil Service Commission and contacted the Commission to find out what they were planning with reference to this matter. I was told that they were planning a hearing.

I immediately notified Mr. Remington that I felt it necessary to relieve him of his duties and place him on indefinite leave until the matter was cleared up. While I felt this prompt action was called for by me, I did not intend it to indicate a decision that he was guilty. That decision will be made by the commission's regional loyalty board.

Truman Gives New Inflation Warning

postwar boom to an era of sustained and stable prosperity."

Before his economic report reached the Senate floor, where it stirred a round of caustic recriminations, the House Banking Committee heard Administration representatives urge quick passage of anti-inflation legislation.

Paul Porter, former OPA head and now a White House aide, returned to testify before the House Banking Committee and sat through three hours of campaign oratory from committee members. Nettled by the trend of the hearing, Porter added no little to the pungency of the debate.

A suggestion by Representative Monroney (D., Okla.) that the committee go into executive session and decide whether it would act on anti-inflation legislation before hearing more witnesses met with no response. Another suggestion of his, that Republican nominee Thomas E. Dewey be called to give his views on inflation control drew fire from Chairman Wolcott (R., Mich.).

"If you can get the President to come down here I'll ask Mr. Dewey," Wolcott said.

A chorus from the Democratic side reminded him that Mr. Truman had come to Congress with his anti-inflation message only last Tuesday.

"If President Truman will come before this committee," Wolcott retorted, "I'll ask Dewey, Wallace and Thurmond."

Wolcott also said in answer to a demand that the Republicans were "in honor bound to come up with a remedy of their own" if they refused to accept Mr. Truman's remedy.

"We have a remedy of our own."

In his economic report Mr. Truman blamed the current inflation on three principal interacting factors:

1. "Consumer demand for goods and services, business demand for investment goods, and demands arising from expanding Government defense and foreign aid programs . . ."

2. "We are currently in the midst of a round of substantial wage and price increases in major basic industries (which) foreshadow continuing and ramifying effects on cost structures and prices in many related lines of production, on the cost of living, and on further wage demands."

3. "Credit expansion, partly a cause and partly a result of inflation, still persists."

"These facts," said Mr. Truman, "add up to a clear and disconcerting conclusion. In spite of some favorable factors, we are in the very midst of gathering inflationary forces which day by day are imposing additional hardships upon countless families, and day by day are undermining the foundations of the remarkably high level of postwar prosperity that we have thus far maintained.

"The hard facts of today leave no room for complacency . . . We must be on our guard lest our national prosperity and security be undermined by inflation at home or by misery abroad."

He pointed out that "despite my repeated warnings and recommendations" adequate legislation for controlling inflation had not been enacted. It is just as important, he added, to forestall business collapse as it is to use the authority of the Government to halt a depression once it has started.

The report itself, prepared by a council headed by Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, warned repeatedly against the dangers of increasing inflation but held that the best to be expected now would be a halt to further price gains. It conceded little chance of an early restoration of the value of the dollar to its prewar level, but added:

"There is nothing sacred about the price marks of 1939 or 1926, and the attempt to restore them would probably create more hardship than it would alleviate."

Unworkable relationship in the price structure, however, the report said, might lead to a break somewhere along the line whose effort would spread throughout the whole economy. In that case:

"If attendant developments which cannot be foreseen did not serve substantially to counteract it, this break well might carry our highly sensitive economy into a general recession of serious proportions."

The "most dangerous error," the report said, would be to assume that because serious setbacks had been avoided so far there was no fear of a disastrous break.

The report concluded with a warning that voluntary controls unsupported by Government action could not be depended upon to affect an inflationary trend. Fear of the uncertain future, it said, and losses to those who restrain their urge to seek higher prices or wages while others who exercise no such restraint profit greatly, are sufficient to prevent any effective voluntary action.

Wolcott's Challenge

Porter's return to the House Banking Committee witness chair brought him immediately up against an accusation by Chairman Wolcott (R., Mich.) that President Truman had been armed by Congress with an effective instrument against inflation but had failed to use it. Wolcott referred to and read from the Anti-Inflation Act of 1947 which set up a complicated method he said the President was "bound to follow" in case of "danger to the economy, safety or defense" of the Nation.

Porter retorted that Mr. Truman had gone through this procedure in the case of short supply and high prices of grain but it died in Wolcott's own committee. The procedure, he said, was unworkable anyway, and suggested that Congress had set up a situation where its committees could "take over the administration of the law."

The witness then unrolled a chart showing trends of wholesale prices back to 1749 on which every war, from the Revolution to World War II, was represented by a dizzy climb to inflation and an even more dizzy plunge into depression. This, he said, showed clearly the inevitability of the present inflation and a subsequent depression unless something were done to control both.

Smith Seeks Definition

Representative Smith (R., Ohio) then took over and asked Porter to define inflation which, Smith said he should be able to do since he was before the committee as an "expert" on the subject.

Porter replied that he was there "as an advocate and not as a personal defendant" and that he didn't believe anybody could give a precise definition of inflation. It was affected by so many factors, he said, that it wasn't susceptible of precise definition and "nobody can be dogmatic and intelligent at once."

Smith then took Porter on a tour of China, Greece, Germany, Russia and back to the Revolutionary United States for a definition. Exasperated, Porter finally came up with this:

"Inflation is meat at $1.50 a pound."

When Smith then led him back into history, Porter confessed to some haziness and implied small interest in "post mortems."

Hopes for 'Patient'

"Medical science," said Smith, himself a doctor, "is based on post mortems."

"I hope," snapped Porter, "the patient is still alive when this post mortem is completed."

In the chill that followed, Smith returned to the attack with a charge that the Administration, in its request for housing legislation and for a 65-million-dollar loan for a United Nations home, was adding to inflation by attempting to cut into already scarce building materials. Porter denied this. Housing need not be inflationary, he said, if it:

1. Made lower rents possible.

2. Used materials now going into nonessential construction.

"I believe," he said, "we could stop building enough gin mills, pool halls and theaters to build the United Nations headquarters and low rent housing both."

After a brief tilt over the possible inflationary aspect of new public power construction requested by Mr. Truman, Smith asked if he thought it would be "politically feasible" to carry out the Administration's program. Politics, he explained, had to enter the issue.

"I'm afraid it will," said Porter, "much to the detriment of the country."

Karl Marx Comes In

Smith had the last word.

"It is very clear," he said, "that Mr. Porter has given no indication here of understanding what constitutes inflation either from the historical standpoint or its application at the present time. The powers he is asking for are the same used by the Bolsheviks when they overthrew Russia, that Karl Marx advocated, that Mussolini and Hitler used.

"You are here not only asking for power to control inflation by your definition but for power to inflate at will because you are not willing to give up your present powers over the banking system."

Representative Brown (D., Ga.) expressed some doubt about supporting an anti-inflation program unless it was made clear how the price of clothing made of wool and cotton mixed could be controlled. He pointed out that the price of raw wool was still rising while the price of the South's money crop had taken a costly plunge.

Cigarette Price Rise of 1-Cent A Pack Expected

Cigarette prices in District chain stores are expected to go up 1 cent a package next week, while smaller retailers may raise their prices before then, spokesmen said yesterday.

The increases will follow an announcement by most manufacturers that they were raising their prices to jobbers by 40 cents a thousand for most of the brands on the market.

However, local wholesalers said yesterday they had not received such an announcement as yet from Brown & Williamson, makers of Kool, Raleigh and Wings cigarettes.

Eccles Criticizes Truman's Bank Credit Control Plan

succeeded him as board president, indicating that McCabe agreed with him on that point.

Eccles went farther than that. He "read the record" of the removal of inflation controls. As he read it the "record" indicated that he laid the blame for the burst of inflation and its continuance to this date, directly at the doors of the White House.

He insisted that his chief desire was to keep the record straight as far as the Federal Reserve Board was concerned, during the immediate postwar period when he was its president.

"Here's part of the record," he said, reading from notes. "It shows how very quickly the inflation controls were removed, and how prematurely they were removed."

Compared to Harness

On August 18, he said, three days after the end of the war, Mr. Truman notified the Federal agencies to move as rapidly as possible to get rid of price, production, wages and other controls, so that the Nation could return to a free enterprise economy.

The day after the end of the war with Japan, he recalled, President Truman ordered rationing and price controls on gasoline removed. He went on reading the list of controls lifted by the White House, including controls over building construction, controls over exports, and listing 90 items removed from price controls.

"All of you know," he said, "what later on happened to wage controls."

Eccles referred to the over-all controls program as "harness controls." Each control was an integral part of the whole system, he said, so that when one was removed it weakened the others.

With the removal of some, he said, "it was like a horse trying to pull a load with part of his harness off."

Price controls without rationing and allocations caused the entire structure to "just fall apart," he asserted.

GOP Has Field Day

Republican members of the committee had a field day with Eccles, although he frequently argued with them over the dangers of tax cuts such as they voted earlier this year.

There are two important fields to control inflation, Eccles said, taxation and credit controls. He said the board always favored credit controls, both by limiting installment buying, and increasing bank reserve requirements for both time and demand deposits.

"Inflation," he said, "is not as urgent as war, but in the long run it can be almost as serious."

The urgency of war, he said, made it easier to enforce controls than in periods of inflation, although they are as important in one period as in another.

He said that the time to build up budgetary surplus was in times of inflation—to meet the budgetary deficits "you'll have in times of depression, whether you like it or not."

Cain Defends Tax Cut

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) argued that the recent tax cut was necessary in order to hold down Government spending. While the Administration was opposing tax reductions, it was presented scores of ideas, Cain said, to appropriate money for new adventures—some of them worthy.

"We have a Congress," Eccles said, "to hold down such expenditures," and then snapped:

"What you're saying is that under our system we can't plan for or deal with a depression."

Eccles at one time declared flatly:

"I'm not defending the Administration's proposals. Some are very helpful," referring to opposition to reduction of taxes.

"On the other hand some of the propositions are inflationary and tend to nullify other parts of the program.

"As a whole it doesn't make economic sense."

He repeated his prediction of Thursday that the country is headed for a "bust." When asked whether the expiration this fall of Federal housing loan guarantees might not touch off the slump, he replied:

"It might well do it. Certainly we're likely to have one sooner or later. If in October or November there is some adjustment, so much the better." He explained that the worse the current inflation gets, the worse the ensuing deflation will be.

Snyder earlier had asked the committee to support a 10 per cent increase in bank reserves, and also give the Administration power to regulate installment buying. Snyder's support of the President's proposal for increases in the reserves of member banks of the Reserve System, was lukewarm. He told the committe that:

1. "The expansion of bank credit, except in the fields of consumers and real estate financing, has not in my opinion, been a major contributing force to present inflationary pressures."

2. "I have always believed that our chief reliance for the control of inflationary bank credit lies in good judgment of the individual bankers in the 15,000 banks in the United States."

Farm Question Raised

He said he has the same attitude toward price controls as he has toward castor oil. They should be used only in emergencies.

When members tried to enlarge upon that description, Snyder replied: "I'm not going to get into a medical discussion."

Senator C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.) asked why the Administration is asking powers to reduce prices and at the same time is using Government funds to support prices for farm products.

Snyder replied that was a question for the Secretary of Agriculture, "I prefer to discuss only the banking side," he said.

"You're begging the question," shot back Buck.

"I'm not begging the question," was Snyder's reply.

Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.) put in to say that "it is unfair to unload on the farmers" the blame for inflation or high prices."

Woman, 60, Found Dead Beside Her Blazing Bed

Mrs. Frances V. Drew, 60, was found dead beside a burning bed in her home, at 5614 14th st. nw., shortly after 2 p. m. yesterday.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, said he will conduct an autopsy today to determine whether the woman died from a sleeping drug, from burns or from carbon monoxide poisoning.

Homicide squad detectives said a sleeping drug was found near the body. Also nearby were five letters, one written by Mrs. Drew to her husband, Lawrence, two to a son, Lawrence, jr., and two to her two daughters. The detectives said the letters indicated Mrs. Drew was despondent because of ill health.

The coroner and detectives went to the scene after firemen broke into the house to put out the fire and found the woman's body. She had suffered first, second and third degree burns, Dr. MacDonald said.

Police believe she had taken the sleeping potion, then fell asleep while smoking a cigarette.

Hog Prices Advance to Record High

Hog prices soared to new all-time high records yesterday in all important livestock centers, forecasting higher meat prices.

The highest price recorded yesterday was $31.50 per 100 pounds at Baltimore—$1 a hundred above Thursday. Chicago prices went up to $31. Kansas City price was $30. All but Kansas City were new highs for those markets.

These prices compare with the low for the year of $21 on May 5 just at the close of the packing house strikes.

Livestock prices, which determine meat prices, have gone up sharply since President Truman asked for controls on meat last November 17. Since that date, hogs in Chicago have gone from $25 to $31; steers from $32 to $41; lambs from $23.25 to $29.75—all per hundred weight.

At the same time grains have gone down sharply, due to prospects for an all-record harvest this fall. Since November 17 wheat has dropped from $3.12 to $2.21 at Kansas City; corn at Chicago from $2.36 to $2.13; oats at Minneapolis from $1.17 to 71 cents; rye from $2.85 to $1.64 and flour from $8.95 (wholesale at Buffalo) to $7.25.

The International Shoe Co. at St. Louis announced that wholesale prices of shoes will go up Monday about 10 cents a pair—influenced by higher livestock prices.

The Agriculture Department reported in Washington, meanwhile that, led by advances in meat animals, dairy and poultry products, the level of farm prices increased 2 per cent between mid-June and mid-July.

Prices of grains, soybeans and cotton declined.

The index of prices received by farmers in mid-July was 301 per cent of the 1909-14 period. This compared with 295 per cent a month earlier, 276 a year ago and with a record of 307 last January.

The level of prices paid by farmers for living items and production materials, on the other hand, was unchanged from a month ago.

The index of prices paid by farmers was 251 per cent of the 1909-14 average. This compared with 230 per cent a year ago.

The department reported that the level of farm prices in mid-July was 20 per cent above parity, compared with 18 per cent a month ago.

Parity is a legal standard for measuring farm prices. This standard is declared by law to be equally fair to the farmer and those who buy his products.

2 Candidates See Air Show

Island below 42d st., is the world's largest airport.

Designed principally to handle international traffic, it has already cost 70 million dollars. The Port of New York Authority, which operates it on lease from the city, expects the final cost to be 200 million dollars. The tentative completion date is 1953. Its capacity will be 1000 scheduled flights a day.

Latest Jet Fighters

Planes in the military review will include the latest jet fighters in the Air Force and Navy, with speeds upwards of 600 miles an hour: B-36s, the largest land-based bombers in the world; B-45s, the world's first four-jet bomber; B-29s, the Superfortresses of the Pacific war; B-50s, big brothers of the B-29s, and Navy Douglas AD-1 attack bombers.

Both Mr. Truman and Governor Dewey will arrive for the show by air.

The President will leave Washington at 12:20 p. m. (EST) in his DC-6, The Independence, and land at Idlewild at 1:15. The Governor's hop will be a short one, from nearby LaGuardia Field.

Mr. Truman is scheduled to leave at 3:05 p. m., return to Washington for a brief stop to drop his aides, and then fly on to Independence, Mo.

President Works Aboard His Yacht

By The Associated Press

President Truman worked yesterday aboard the presidential yacht, Williamsburg, cruising on the Potomac River.

Mr. Truman boarded the yacht before dinner Thursday night. The White House said he will return to his office about 9 a. m. (EST) today.

Besides handling usual routine reports and documents, Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross said, Mr. Truman is working on the speech he will make at the dedication of Idlewild, New York's new international airport, today.

Ross was asked about a published report that Mr. Truman is considering a series of "fireside chats" over the radio.

"That's news to me," Ross replied.

8 Dairy Firms Indicted in Chicago Area

Chicago, July 30 (U.P.).—A Federal grand jury today indicted eight major Chicago dairies and 13 of their officials on a charge of violating antitrust laws to keep milk prices abnormally high.

The jury which is investigating the cost of living in the Chicago area charged two of the largest dairies with giving rebates to big grocery chains.

The eight dairies were accused of splitting various wholesale customers among themselves, including the veterans hospital and Great Lakes Naval Training Station here and other county and Federal Government institutions.

The companies were the Bowman Dairy Co.; Borden; Beloit Dairy; Capitol Dairy Co.; Hunding Dairy; Meadowmoor Dairies; Western United Dairy; and American Processing and Sales Co.

One Robinson-Patman violation indictment charged Borden with paying $792,000 in rebates to the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. from 1942 through 1947, and with paying $885,000 to the Jewel Tea Co. for the same years.

The other Robinson-Patman indictment charged Bowman with paying $406,000 in rebates to the A&P in the years 1942 through 1947.

The allocation of wholesale outlets, the indictment said, was worked by the companies agreeing not to make "inducements" to take the customers away from each other.

Farben Blast Damage Set At 15 Million

Ludwigshafen, Germany, July 30 (AP).—French authorities officially estimated tonight that Wednesday's explosion and fire at the huge I. G. Farben plant caused 15 million dollars damage.

The known dead rose to 155. Another 150 to 200 persons were reported missing and possibly dead. Nearly 400 still were in hospitals and another 2100 had been treated for injuries.

German plant officials said American soldiers who rushed across the Rhine bridge from the American zone city of Mannheim "saved 1000 lives" by their prompt action.

District Guard Trouble Ends

Supply difficulties of the District National Guard at their summer training session at Camp Pendleton, Va., were reported solved yesterday.

Col. Charles M. Myers, Second Army training officer, was quoted as saying that two truckloads of some 3992 items of clothing and equipment met remaining deficiencies.

Shortages, which led to Army and National Guard investigations, were reportedly blamed on heavy enlistments during July.

In Washington, Brig. Gen. Albelt L. Cox, District National Guard commander, stated that "one of the purposes of camp training is to train officers and men—and to uncover just such cases of inadequacy."

The two truckloads of supplies, including uniforms, mess kits, boots, blankets, raincoats and other necessities, were obtained at Fort Eustis, Va., and arrived at Camp Pendleton late Thursday.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the District Guard denied a report that an information gag had been imposed on personnel at camp by Second Army headquarters at Fort Meade.

Fliers Going to N. Y. Ceremony

Sixteen F-47 planes from the District's 121st Fighter Squadron will lead National Air Guard units in dedication ceremonies at New York's Idlewild Airport today.

Later in the day the District group led by Maj. W. H. Millikan will rendezvous with other elements of the District Air National Guard at Dover (Del.) for two weeks summer training.

At the Dover air base they will be joined by National Guard airmen from Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland. The four groups, comprising the Fifty-third Fighter Wing, will be under command of Col. John W. Weltman.

Some 400 men will comprise the District group. They will perform dive-bombing, strafing and other aerial gunnery operations.

Finale Tonight

Lights Out For District Stage Shows

When the National Theater's curtain rings down on "Oklahoma!" tonight, Washington will be without a legitimate playhouse.

With the National closing rather than alter its ban against Negroes in the audience, prospects for a 1948-49 legitimate season are slim.

No new progress has been made in attempts to lease the old, Government-owned Belasco Theater on Lafayette Square.

The Federal Works Agency has had only two bids to lease the Belasco, and these have been turned down because of "riders" attached to the offers.

The bids asked that if the lease were canceled short of the 10-year-term, the Government would reimburse the lessees for unamortized renovation costs.

The bids came from Joseph Curtis of New York, nephew of Harry Cohn, president of Columbia Pictures, and the American National Theater and Academy.

Wallace M. Cohen, counsel here for Curtis yesterday said no new bid for the Belasco had been made "as there had been no meeting of minds. We may submit something next week, however," he said.

Albert Carretta, an attorney here for the American National Theater and Academy, said he doubted if ANTA would submit a new bid for the Belasco.

Current plans call for demolishing the Belasco once Congress appropriates the necessary funds. Government stipulation would require the theater to be vacated upon a year's notice to the lessee.

Edmund Plohn, manager of the National for the E Street Theater Corp., last night said the National would reopen "some time in September" as a film house, after alterations.

Pilot Killed In Midair By Pirates

Macao, July 30 (AP).—The lone survivor of a plane crash that took 25 lives confessed today his robber gang caused the tragedy by trying to seize the airliner, Police Commissioner Luis A. M. Paletti announced.

Meeting unexpected opposition, the pirates excitedly shot the pilot and copilot of the Cathay Pacific flying boat just after it had taken off July 16 for Hong Kong from this Portuguese colony. Their bodies jammed the controls and the plane fell into the sea.

Seven of the dead, including Pilot Dale Cramer, were Americans.

The survivor was Wong Yu, a Chinese, who suffered broken legs.

The pirates were gambling that robbery and ransom of the passengers would be profitable. They apparently had no knowledge that four Chinese millionaires were aboard and that one had a huge sum on his person (estimated by his widow at as much as $125,000 United States.)

When they demanded that Gramer relinquish the controls, a white passenger tried to interfere, and Co-Pilot K. S. McDuff struck at one pirate with the plane's metal flagstaff.

Three brigands opened fire, 18 shots tumbling Cramer and McDuff against the controls. The plane fell 500 feet, carrying to their deaths all except Wong, who leaped from a window and was picked up by a junk.

New Protest Made in Md. Curb on News

Further opposition to restrictions in Baltimore on reporting of crime and court news, and proposed extension to all Maryland, developed yesterday.

Joining papers that already have condemned the restrictions, the Frederick (Md.) News said in an editorial that special court rules in Baltimore put newspapers and radio stations there "in a straitjacket in reporting crime news."

State Senator Robert B. Kimble (R., Allegany) said he would consider introducing legislation to end the Baltimore city court curb "were it not that I understand a measure of that nature is already being prepared," the Associated Press reported.

Kimble said he understood a measure to prevent application of the Baltimore rule to all of Maryland, and to end it in Baltimore, would be offered by a group of legislators from Washington County.

State Senator D. Kenneth McLaughlin, Washington County Republican, announced several days ago he would support or introduce a bill to void any rule imposed by the courts on the press and radio in Maryland.

Under the Baltimore order prohibiting report of an accused person's statements between the time of arrest and trial among other things, contempt of court citations have been issued against five Baltimore area radio stations and a radio news broadcaster for their handling of the Eugene H. James case. They have been given until October 1 to answer the contempt citations.

James, 31-year-old Baltimore janitor, is reported to have confessed the killing of two 11-year-old girls, one in Baltimore, the other in Washington.

The executive committee of the Maryland Press Association will meet today in the Lord Baltimore Hotel, Baltimore, to discuss the news curb.

Glenn T. James, president of the State organization, will preside and members of the Baltimore daily press will participate.

Housing Showdown

The arrogance of the Republican run-around on housing is rivaled only by its political inanity. If the GOP leaders in the House were bent upon alienating war veterans and the army of other Americans desperately seeking places to live, they could have chosen no more effective means than their present outright refusal even to consider a housing bill urgently recommended by the President, sponsored by the leader of their party in the Senate and indeed passed by the Senate during its last session. This amounts to an open proclamation that the building and real estate lobbies completely govern housing policy so far as the House leadership is concerned.

By deciding to recess for three days of what was called as an emergency special session, House leaders have effectively barred any chance of "discharging" their Rules Committee from further consideration of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill before August 23—the first discharge day the bill could be forced out by petition. And Republican leaders now assert that they mean to bring the special session to an end before that date. There are already more than 150 signatures on the discharge petition toward the 218 necessary to make it controlling. We hope that Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas is correct in asserting, "They won't dare adjourn if a majority of the House signs."

The country is entitled at the very least to a showdown vote on this measure. It seems to us, therefore, that Walter Reuther, president of the UAW-CIO, was quite justified in demanding from Governor Dewey "an immediate expression of your attitude on this vital issue." The Republican nominee for the Presidency can no longer escape commitment on housing. Continued silence on his part will constitute consent to the conspiracy to kill the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. By the exercise of affirmative leadership, he can revive it and bring about its enactment into law, together, as we have already said, with the allocations which would enable the measure to produce the houses.

Joe Tinker

Death has reversed the sequence which made forever famous the names of Tinker, Evers and Chance. Frank Chance, the first baseman and manager of the Chicago Cubs of the early twentieth century, was the first to go; he died in 1924. Last year Johnny Evers died at Albany after a lingering illness. Last Tuesday Joe Tinker died suddenly of pneumonia, having almost miraculously survived the amputation of a gangrenous leg some 19 months earlier.

The celebrity of this trio is owing quite as much to Mr. Franklin P. Adams, who has survived them all, as to their own technical abilities. The old Chicago Cubs, winners of four pennants and two world's championships were certainly one of the great clubs of what is now considered the golden age of baseball, but it would be hard to prove they were the greatest virtuosi of double plays. The world's record for the largest number of double plays in a single season belongs to the contemporary era. It was achieved, curiously enough, during the recent war years by the Boston Red Sox. The National League record belongs to the Cincinnati Reds, who established it in 1928 and equaled it again in 1931.

Here, however, some allowance must be made for the livening of the ball, the alteration of the pitching rules, and the other changes introduced in the 1920s. But even in its heyday the Tinker-Evers-Chance mechanism, great as it was, was deemed by many experts somewhat inferior in technical finish to their younger contemporaries, the Barry-Collins-McInnis axis of the Philadelphia Athletics. Some even held that the Cubs were slightly surpassed in this particular department by Doolan, Knabe and Bransfield of the Phillies.

One thing is certain, however: Of the three Joe Tinker had the greatest share of natural gifts as a ballplayer. Chance was remarkable chiefly for good judgment; the fragile, waspish Evers played largely on his nerve. But at the moment of his death Tinker still held the record for flawless fielding over the largest number of seasons, and this becomes even more impressive when one remembers that competitors and contemporaries included Honus Wagner, Mike Doolan and Donnie Bush. He was no great batsman, perhaps, but we have the testimony of Christy Mathewson that Tinker gave him more trouble than any other batter in the league.

Unlike the sour, irascible Evers, Tinker was by nature a genial, easy-going fellow and perhaps the best liked man among the ballplayers of his time. Because of this, he was able to play an important role in the organization of the now forgotten Federal League. Well, now he is gone, and the men who were boys in the days of his greatness feel older and sadder.

Cripps On America

The late Lord Lothian must have stirred uneasily in his grave over Sir Stafford Cripps' comment on America. Cripps had just been in conference with Messrs. Hoffman, Harriman and Finletter on ways and means of contributing to European cooperation. Afterward he saw the press, and rebuked a questioner for seeing an example for Europe in the American federation. He implied there was no federation in America. "The analogy of the 48 States," he said, "is a simplification because they have a single government and banking system, which don't exist in Europe."

Our own work would be much simpler if Cripps were correct. There are, in fact, 49 governments and 50 banking systems in America, the latter being one more than the governments by virtue of the existence of the Federal Reserve System. And their relations are the stuff not only of our politics but of our journalism. It is either a tribute to the smoothness with which the Federal system seems to operate in foreign eyes or a reflection on the teaching of American political institutions abroad that Sir Stafford should be capable of such an egregious error.

—Sir Stafford was evidently on the defensive when he made his comment. A good deal of criticism has been heard of late that the cause of a European community is handicapped by the parochialism of the Labor government. Sir Stafford shrugged off the complaint. He also sidestepped an inquiry on the slowpoke development of European cooperation by citing improved data on British output. Sir Stafford knows what the critics have in mind. He is probably the only member of the government who has grasped the concept of continentalism as the alternative to nationalism. What is more important, particularly in the case of a man in his position, is that he wants to realize it. As recently as May 11 he told the House of Commons that he had assured the finance ministers of western Europe of British willingness to "adapt its economy to this cooperation." And he meant the word adapt to be taken literally, for he went on to explain the "considerable readjustment" that might be involved.

It sometimes seems that prosperity, like peace, is something that everybody wants, but won't pay the price for. When the members of Parliament understood what Sir Stafford was driving at, that he was not content to indulge merely in what Mr. Bidault is reputed to have described as "dancing for the Americans," the reaction was "cold and startled." This is the way that the London Economist described it. Perhaps Cripps became disillusioned by his reception. Seeing how the MPs took his announcement, seeing that on both sides of the House they clung as dourly to the status quo as his own colleagues in the government, he may have accepted the inevitable. Certainly the statement after his talks with ECA officials gives such an impression.

In a way it is understandable, though unfortunate, that a man in Sir Stafford's place should cease to be a missionary for the European community. It is understandable because his is an administrative task of the utmost importance. He is in charge of the business of spurring the output of farm and factory in hard-pressed Britain. However, by the same token he is developing a framework which will make any transition to specialization of function in company with European countries increasingly difficult. He has to persuade the British to make, among other things, more watches and more agricultural tools. But in a European system France would specialize on watches, Britain on tools, and both would be cheaper and more plentiful. Without giving examples Sir Stafford spelled out in these terms the "adaptation" of British industry that left the MPs "cold and startled."

There was the same reaction when Hamilton and Madison and the rest sought to integrate the sovereign States of America. But their arguments and their zeal and their leadership triumphed. Great men provide the environment for greatness. We now know that America became great because the States of the Union pulled down their tariff barriers and pooled their energies in economic activity. Integration is the ideal with which on both sides of the ocean the Marshall Plan was launched; it was conceived in American audacity, and can succeed only by European audacity. In creating their economic integration, however, the American States did not abandon their sovereignty. They used it, giving the Federal Government specific powers. Lord Bryce explains how, and Lord Lothian regarded the great experiment as the only possible analogy for Europe.

Merger Control

The Federal Trade Commission has made another appeal to Congress to fill a loophole in the Clayton Act against industrial monopolies. The FTC wants to prevent companies from purchasing the assets of other companies, if such purchases would lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly. The FTC is at present powerless to arrest the growing concentration of economic power by the merger route unless merger creates monopoly, although it does have the power to prevent companies from acquiring the stock of other concerns, if such purchases merely lessen competition. The result of this loophole in the law is that mergers have been encouraged as an alternative to stock purchases. As the FTC says, "Thus the paradox is presented that the more effective is the enforcement of the law against collusion among competitors, the greater is the incentive to achieve the same objectives through purchase, consolidation and merger."

It is the purpose of the antitrust laws to maintain a system of free competitive enterprise, and protect the public and business alike from unfair competition and monopolistic encroachment. One obvious means of achieving this end is to check the growth of mergers that tend to stifle competition before the danger stage is reached. This objective is unquestionably being circumvented by the loophole in the Clayton Act permitting mergers to be effected through corporate purchases of the assets of other corporations. The FTC points out that legislation to correct this situation through an amendment of the Clayton Act has been pending in both Senate and House since 1945, and has been the subject of extensive hearings. It is, therefore, an item of business that could easily be disposed of at the next session. For the subject has been thoroughly canvassed and bills to amend the Clayton Act as requested have been approved by committees of both houses, although they have never reached the floor for debate.

To The Gallows

There is something rather pathetic about Congressman Rees' disappointment over the prevalence of loyalty among Government employes. The President's loyalty program, he says, has been "ineffective" because no one has yet been fired and only 438 persons have resigned as a result of FBI investigations. It is as though he believed disaffection to be the rule rather than the exceedingly rare exception among men and women working for the United States. Indeed, he seems so impatient to make heads roll that he cannot wait for completion of the orderly procedures of appeal and review provided for by the President's loyalty order. He has announced not only that his Postoffice and Civil Service Committee will forthwith investigate the failure of Government loyalty boards to condemn suspects more swiftly and severely but also that he himself will within the next few days name on the floor of the House individual Government workers who, in his opinion, are disloyal and ought to be dismissed.

Mr. Rees, whose own loyalty to American principles as he understands them is indisputable, would do well to think a little about the implications of such an act. He can, of course, use the immunity conferred upon him by this membership in the House of Representatives to accuse anyone of anything at all without the slightest fear of any legal consequences. He can, if he chooses, irremediably destroy the reputation of any individual by denouncing him as disloyal; for, obviously, no amount of subsequent clearance can remove the stigma. He can, for that matter, completely wreck the loyalty program by shortcircuiting even the inadequate system of hearings and appeals which it provides.

But it would be astonishing, would it not, if a United States Representative from Kansas should think it consistent with the American tradition of fair play to hit a fellow American without giving him a chance to hit back, or consistent with the concept of a government of laws to condemn men without any semblance of due process, or, finally, consistent with security to dismiss employes on so quixotic a basis. Purges, Mr. Rees ought to remember, are symptoms of the police state, and the tumbril is recorded in history as a symbol of tyranny.

President Stassen

It is a reflection of the magnitude and mass production character of present day American universities that so many of them are seeking for their presidencies men whose talents and experience lie not so much in scholarship as in public affairs and administration. New York's Columbia University has just installed General Eisenhower as its chief executive, a post he declined to relinquish even for the sake of nomination to the Presidency of the United States. And now Harold Stassen, also much mentioned but lately as a presidential possibility, has been chosen to manage the affairs of the University of Pennsylvania. Both men are likely to bring to their respective institutions imagination, energy and executive skill calculated to compensate for their want of academic background.

The trustees of the University of Pennsylvania say that they selected Governor Stassen "above all" for "his inspirational appeal to the youth of America." That appeal is essentially an appeal for participation in the public affairs of the time; and indeed in accepting the designation the former Minnesota Governor declared that he will "continue a vigorous interest" in such affairs. The presidency of a university is an appropriate post from which to do so—provided, of course, that personal political ambition is not permitted to interfere with devotion to academic interests. For a university can no longer be a cloister. It must be consecrated not alone to abstract learning but equally to leadership in the promotion of an enlightened public opinion.

Seen in this light, the presidency of a great university is a public post of the utmost importance. The story is told in Cleveland Amory's The Proper Bostonians that once, when a caller came to see President Lowell of Harvard, he was gravely informed by a secretary, "The president is in Washington talking with Mr. Taft." Governor Stassen has been accorded a great honor and a magnificent opportunity. It should abundantly solace him for a political defeat which may in time prove no more than a setback.

"Wallace Progressivism"

It's encouraging to note that you have been able to impart to your feature story reporters the same venomous attitude reflected in your editorial of July 26, "Wallace Progressivism."

However, for the sake of keeping your readers informed in these confused days, why doesn't your editorial writer leave off the fancy flourishes and self-satisfying, well-rounded phrases of his trade and get down to facts unobscured by generalizations and name-calling? Who are the Communists who "suppressed" the alleged "revolt"? And why doesn't your writer tip off your news editor about such a revolt so you can tell your readers about it?

Further, your editorial blandly says that red-baiting is a term applied to any opposition to Communist tactics—yet no mention is made of the slanderous "red-baiting" which has been carried on (by your paper, too) in an attempt to slap the hammer and sickle on the Progressives without any factual proof whatsoever.

I also think the snide references to "Communist writing or editing of Wallace's speech" are typical of the actions of a press that is free to slander by implication—once more offering no more proof than that Wallace stands for certain changes which the Russians also favor.

As for your paraphrasing of Wallace's statement on the lives (of Americans) lost because of the cold war—it might be helpful to remind your readers that Mr. Wallace said we could have spent our cold war billions fighting disease instead of tilting at windmills.

Mr. Wallace has not made himself ridiculous in the eyes of the electorate—nor is his following comprised of illogical dreamers. We who believe in Henry Wallace believe a lot of things in the face of logic, to be sure. Some of those things are: That a Congress should enact laws to benefit the people (price, rent, housing and equality of opportunity legislation); that nations can be responsive to the wills of their citizens; that no political party has a right to run a country when it has indicated that it is unfit to do so—or when its leaders have offered no concrete proposals to eliminate our domestic and international headaches.

Awful Retaliation

I'm beginning to be fearful of Drew Pearson's brilliant conceptions for Americanizing the world. Some time ago he persuaded a million or more Americans who had relatives in Italy to write letters to the latter telling them how to vote in their election. Some objected to this as an interference in another country's affairs which Washington deprecated.

My objection is more important. Naturally, being an American, I take it for granted we should tell the world we are the smartest people there are. But, we have an election coming on. I live in dread that other nations will have become Pearsonized. I expect hundreds of letters from them telling me to vote for Dewey, or not to vote for Dewey, if I want their friendship.

And now the ineffable Drew has another brilliant idea. We are to drop leaflets from our bombers over Europe, telling them how peace-loving our brass-hats and bankers are; and how, as far as U. S. A. is concerned, "All's right with the world."

What is going to happen when foreign bombers begin dropping Pearsonized leaflets in my yard, telling me what a simpleton I am to put up with Republicans and Democrats, just as we tell them what idiots they be? I spend half my day now picking up from the front lawn used paper cups, candy wrappers, rouged tissues, etc., thrown there by passersby with that insouciance so characteristic of our American love of freedom. I just won't be able to take it, that's all.

Pershing Story

It is seldom one reads such a fine article, both in substance and in the manner in which it was written, as the one by Mr. Marshall Andrews (July 16) on the life of General Pershing.

Please add my letter to the numerous congratulations which I am sure you must have received.

ARTHUR R. WILSON,
Major General, U. S. A. (Ret.).

Retention Credit

For some time there has been comment on the benefits granted veterans in civil service positions. It seems to me that there should be some change made and the veteran should not be given over-all preferential retention status in Government.

Certainly a fair man could have no objection to a plan wherein a veteran in Government service would be given retention credit based on every six-month period, or any portion thereof, spent in military service. This could be counted as two years' Government service when length of employment became a deciding factor in reduction in force. It would obviate the situation of men with 20 or more years' service in Government having less seniority than the veteran with two years' Government service in back of him.

Going Home

It might be unfortunate if the Republican members of Congress decide to "stick around for a week or two and then go home." The independent voters might decide next November 2 to leave them there.

Anti-Soviet Articles

In Novoye Russnoye Slovo, an American paper published in the Russian language in New York, there is an article signed by its chief editor, Mr. M. Weinbaum, which gives the following information.

In Saltzburg, Austria, in the American zone there was published the weekly Russian paper Ogni (Lights). The last number of this paper appeared June 27 with this statement by the publisher:

"In accord with the new order of the American authority our paper is strictly forbidden to publish any article (original or translation) directed against the Soviet government.

"Under such circumstances we cannot publish a paper which would have the right to call itself an organ of independent thought. Therefore the publisher of Ogni informs its readers with great regret that he has decided to discontinue it and this issue is the last one."

The misfortune of Ogni has its own history. In the latter part of May the editor of the paper, Mr. M. Soloviev, was arrested and court-martialed. He was accused of printing an anti-Soviet article which was contrary to American orders. He was tried on June 22 and was sentenced to three months' imprisonment. His sentence included time spent in prison awaiting trial and the rest was suspended. The command of the American zone was dissatisfied with the "soft" sentence and again he was released apparently upon the intervention of Washington.

Nevertheless, it appears that the case of Mr. Soloviev is not closed because Mr. Weinbaum discloses that there are in Washington persons of great authority who continue to believe that democratic papers in the Russian language are a harmful enterprise and that criticism of the Soviet system is contrary to the laws of the United States.

The daily paper Moroye Russkoye Slovo is the oldest (38 years) independent paper in the Russian language. I believe this paper has done more in Americanizing the Russian immigrants than any other institution not excluding government offices.

Contributors to this paper in fact have included many Russian journalists, writers, scientists, artists, politicians who are known throughout the world. I will name a few: Victor Chernov, Professors Karpovich, Prokopovich, Fedor Shaliapin and others. The paper is very reliable in its information, especially under signatures of members of its editorial staff. I regret to say that in recent times the paper has published many articles on cases similar to that of Mr. Soloviev and the paper Ogni.

Reading all this amazing information one is compelled to compare these activities with the attitude of the Communists toward the United States. In recent times the American papers have given space to what the Soviet and the satellite countries are saying about us. But this information is only an infinitesimal part of that which is in reality printed by the Bolsheviks. As a daily reader of Soviet papers and magazines, I personally know how much space is devoted to discussions of the United States, despite the limited space of four pages.

At the same time we persecute Russian democrats, enemies of Stalin's dictatorship. Communist propagandists consistently teach that Americans persecute all Russians, even those who are enemies of dictatorship.

I believe that in a future war our most important ally will be the Russian people. The Russian people more than anybody have suffered under the Communist dictatorship. Millions of Russians died during the civil war. Millions were wiped out during the purges, collectivization, and so on.

According to the most conservative estimate there are at the present time no less than 12 million persons in prisons and concentration camps in the Soviet Union. Millions of political prisoners in Russia and their friends and relatives; more than a million Russian immigrants and DPs are our allies and will be the most loyal and helpful associates in the war against dictatorship. In order to utilize to the fullest these allies we must make it clear that we do not wish and will not wage war against the Russian people.

I believe it is clear that such cases as the one of Editor Soloviev should not occur in the practice of our authorities.

Double Job Movement

By Malvina Lindsay

Working Wives

WAR DEVASTATED nations trying to lure stay-at-home wives into industry wonder what carrot the American economy is holding out to married women to induce them to work increasingly outside the home. For despite the world-wide wave of feminine nostalgia for the sheltered life that followed the war, the American labor force now has in it more married than unmarried women.

Yet in Britain, France and other western European countries married women have shown a strong tendency to stick to the household tasks to which many of them have returned. Hence they are being appealed to patriotically, and offered concessions and conveniences to go into factory and store and relieve the manpower shortage.

Many American women war workers left their jobs after the war either to "rest awhile" or "stay home for good." Now many of these, as well as other wives, are working again outside the home, or looking for work. These women of course were not as tired or physically run down as British and other European women whose countries were battle grounds. With them homemaking is an arduous and full-time task, working as they do with short rations of food and with what Americans would regard as primitive household equipment. Nor do the wages they get offer them much inducement to work, especially when there is so little they can buy with their money.

RANKS OF the working wives in this country have been increased from several sources. Nearly half of the former GIs attending school are being assisted by wives who work full-time, 13 per cent by wives who work part-time. Many wives of disabled veterans are employed. And while mothers of small children generally are staying home, yet middle-aged and older women have flocked into the labor market, especially as the cost of living has soared.

Inflation has spurred the American wife to take a job. She is determined that her family's living standards, which were lifted materially during the war, shall not decline. She is determined above everything else not to let down on the food for her family, as she has become more nutrition conscious since the war began. That is one reason that milk sales have not slackened to any extent despite the complaining women do about paying 22 and 23 cents a quart. Americans now drink 20 per cent more milk than in prewar days, and it takes considerable family income to supply this.

American women, much more than their men, have long been ambitious and aggressive in raising living standards. They have relentlessly and ingeniously pressed for advantages for their children. This has helped encourage the steady trend since 1900 of wives to take employment outside the home. This trend was stepped up by the war as new industrial opportunities opened to women. Families in which husbands and wives are both working have doubled since 1940.

THE PRIMARY cause back of working wives is of course the industrialization of society. As the machine has taken over so much of the home, women have had to follow it into factory and store—particularly in the United States. But the feminine aspiration for higher living standards, for economic independence and for fuller self-expression have given the double job movement much of its vitality in this country. And the increase of marriage among women in recent years has naturally brought more married women into the labor force.

The Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor believes the change in social attitude toward the working wife has caused more married women to seek jobs or careers. At one time eyebrows were lifted over the working wife. Later she was regarded as a frivolous nitwit who was invariably working to buy a fur coat or otherwise keep up with the Joneses. But surveys have shown that women, married or otherwise, work primarily to support themselves and often others. And society now generally accepts the idea that married women have the right to use their skills and talents in whatever way they wish.

While the pendulum of social attitude in this country as elsewhere has now swung toward what is loosely called "femininity" it does not mean that women have to stay in the home to make a special feminine contribution to society. In time the industrial age is likely to bring that realization to women everywhere.

Bigart Articles

After reading the articles on "the other side" in Greece by Homer Bigart, I simply want you to know how much I have appreated them. I've enjoyed The Washington Post chiefly because I think you try to be fair. I realize that this is hard to do when facts about one side of a controversy are so very hard to get. But continue to do your best. It is the only way.

Oxford Is Shakespeare

A Communication

THE RECENT interviews in The Washington Post on the subject of Shakespeare by six sulky college professors of English exposed such (perhaps defensive) ignorance that it becomes my quaint task to reprove and instruct them in a subject wherein they are supposed to be apodictic if not even charmismic authorities.

A bit clumsily these pedagarchs avoided committing themselves with regard to the Oxford claims by escaping through the very convenient Verulam mousehole. For the Baconian auctorial theory has long since exploded by a kind of spontaneous combustion of its own fantastic symbolism, numerology and cryptographia which proved anything, everything and nothing. This has given the uneasy academic priestcraft an easy "out." Any opinion whatever which is heterodox to the traditional Stratford view is sneeringly nugified as nonsense. "Don't give it another thought."

But that Shakespeare of Stratford was the author of the immortal works is as much a "theory" as the Baconian, my brethren, and not even so well reasoned. Many references to the writer Shakespeare exist, yes, but does any of them identify him as the burgher on the Avon? Nay, not one. No writing of his exists except six shaky, almost illegible signatures. His whole biography as a supposed writer is a monstrous mystifying edifice of the imagination, based on conjecture, hearsay and old wives' tales. In the Encyclopaedia Britannica the article on Shakespeare contains over 50 statements qualified by such terms as "probably," "it is likely that" and "we may suppose that."

This is the House that Jack (Aubrey) built; and is the Shakespeare canon still taught in our schools and colleges? Yes, sir, bald-headed profs. still believe in Santa Claus and the precocious butcher boy of Stratford.

THAT SUCH a sordid provincial nonentity as the few reports describe him, whose daughter couldn't even sign her own name, was incapable of rising to the greatest poetic heights while indulging in petty lawsuits and peddling malt has been the expressed belief of such thinkers as Schlegel, Disraeli, Bismarck, Herbert Spencer, Hallam, Dickens, Hawthorn, Emerson, Lowell, Henry James and Mark Twain.

The Stratford and Baconian theories are based entirely on guesswork. The Oxford view is supported by valid and circumstantial documentary evidence. In 1920 J. Thomas Looney upset the ancient tradition by his book Shakespeare Identified, and changed the whole Elizabethan literary picture. A new claimant emerged in Edward De Vere, seventeenth Earl of Oxford, the most brilliant genius in the constellation of talent that illuminated the court of the Virgin Queen. It only adds to the Shakespeare mystery that he has been ignored or vilified by historians, although he played by far the most important part in the British renaissance.

Since the book was published the English Shakespeare Fellowship and the American branch have done an immense amount of research in Elizabethan historical records; and every new piece of evidence has strengthened the Oxford claim to authorship.

WHAT, precisely, is this new documentary evidence? Let's lay the Oxford cards on the table. Here are the basic facts of Oxford's literary life. Space prevents citing the authorities here but every item can be substantiated by the fellowship as to author, book and page.

1. Edward De Vere was praised by his contemporaries as a poet and dramatist of the highest excellence. 2. He was an acknowledged leader and critic of the literary set of his time. 3. He had a lifelong interest in the stage and was supervising patron of several dramatic companies performing Shakespeare plays. 4. He was a lessee of the Blackfriars Theater and one of his companies played at the famous Boar's Head, the scene of the revels of Falstaff and Prince Hal.

5. He acted frequently in court masques and revels, first when he was a boy at Warwick. 6. He was a well known patron of the arts and many books were eulogistically dedicated to him. 7. He owned at least a dozen of the "source books" which critics agree must have been read by Shakespeare. Golding was his uncle and adviser, Lyly was his private secretary. 8. He was highly educated, having degrees from both Oxford and Cambridge Universities, and read Latin, Greek, French and Italian. 9. As a royal ward he was brought up at the court of Queen Elizabeth and was for some years her favorite.

10. He traveled for over a year on the Continent, spent some months in Italy and discussed religion and philosophy with Sturmius at Wittenberg. 11. He fought for a while in the Low Countries and with Sussex in England. 12. He made several sea trips and equipped and fought a ship against the Spanish Armada. 13. He spent three years studying law at Gray's Inn. 14. He was a champion in the tournament and an expert musician. 15. He was known to his friends as "Gentle Master William," and had an estate on the River Avon.

16. His crest as Lord Bulbec was a lion shaking a spear. 17. The Earl of Southampton, to whom Venus and Adonis was dedicated, had been strongly urged to marry Oxford's daughter; and of the "Incomparable Paire of Brethren" Montgomery became Oxford's son-in-law and Pembroke was at one time engaged to his other daughter. As dedicatees of the expensive First Folio, they doubtless paid for the publication.

IT WAS the custom of Elizabethan writers of noble birth not only to publish their works anonymously, but some, even clerics, used inferior persons as "stooges" whose names were printed as authors on their title pages. Moreover, the circumstances of De Vere's life, his consorting with players and his bohemian habits, loss of social prestige, near bankruptcy and consequent desire for a lucrative appointment by the Queen gave him special reasons for not wanting to be publicly known as a dramatist, although his contemporaries called him "the best for comedy."

And finally, as visible evidence of a conspiracy of silence, we have the X and infra-red photographs by Charles Wisner Barrell of the Shakespeare portraits in the Folger Library and at Hampton Court, showing all three to have been repainted over Oxford's portrait, changing the head and obliterating all identifying details.

Compare this battery of facts with the pea-shooting amphibology and equivokes of Digges and John Greene, the apocryphal anecdotes of Ward and Rowe, the phony, made-over Stratford monument, and who can deny the ineluctable implication that Edward De Vere was the only Shakespearean writer whose intellect and experience qualified him for authorship of the plays and sonnets, and that the name Shakespeare was used as his pseudonym?

BUT WHILE the Oxford authorship is accepted by many of the best English scholars, such as the dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, the master of the Charterhouse School, professors at the Royal Naval College, at Oxford and Liverpool Universities, and authors including Galsworthy, Bellairs and Sigmund Freud, what do we find in America? Although over 100 colleges subscribe to the Shakespeare Fellowship Quarterly in which all these new discoveries are recorded, not one English professor has ever disproved any of the evidence or even commented on it. Their only reaction has been, "The question is settled. There is nothing to discuss."

And so it comes as no surprise that in the recent interviews in The Washington Post every learned doctor pussyfooted the subject. Not one showed that he had ever read the Oxford evidence, not one mentioned the Folger photographs, "The authorship," said one, "is a question that never needed to be settled. I don't think that anyone interested in scientific methods would ever be led astray." Is this the attitude of a scholar, an expert in Elizabethan literature? And listen to this bit of elusive twaddle: "As literature it doesn't matter who wrote the plays—they are wonderful—but historical accuracy is another matter." Can anyone find a meaning in such circumlocution?

The Elizabethans had names for that sort of thing. One of their some 200 figures of speech was called Apoplanesis, or begging the question. Any undergraduate can get a sample free by applying to his English professor and asking about Oxford. Or perhaps he will get what Wilson, 1551, in his Rule of Reason, called the Utis, or The Cuckoe's Song. It would go like this: "These Oxfordians underestimate Shakespeare's education, but it is amply proved by the erudition shown in his plays." Ergo: Shakespeare of Stratford wrote the plays. Q. E. D.

THE STRATFORD obsession is the mumpsimum of the twentieth century. But why do these profs get so hot about Oxford? What is the reason for their rabid empathema, their philodoxian misology which, ostrich-like, refuses to cognize valid evidence? Why does their febrific renitency urge them ever peevishly to cry with Falstaff, "If reasons were as thick as blackberries, I would give no man a reason upon compulsion."

The answer is simple. They are no fools, these Ph.Ds. They know enough to come in when it rains. And boy, is it going to pour! They are frightened out of their logical wits. Afraid of stultifying themselves, afraid of losing their jobs, afraid of the fast approaching band wagon. They are haunted by the dread that modern scholarship based on historic research instead of fanciful dreams, which is making more progress towards Oxford every day, will soon supersede their legendary Shakespearean mythology so insecurely rooted in seventeenth century gossip.

So stall, dodge, shuffle, while you may, Professor Weisenheimer. Suppress, ignore, ridicule, obscure with all the ambages and persphrastic gadgets of evasion. Prate your apopemptic ipse dixit before literature gets the new look. Your time is short, brother! Before you know it some bright young senior will rise in your classroom and boldly announce that your grave fictions have only the "effect of gravy, gravy, gravy."

The Gallup Poll

Democrats' Platform Draws More Attention Than GOP's

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 30.—One effect of the fight within the Democratic Party over President Truman's program has been to stimulate public interest in what the Democratic Party platform has to say about controversial issues.

A survey among voters finds that a higher proportion took the trouble to read all or some of the Democratic platform than was the case with the Republican platform—although neither document got a very widespread reading.

About 4 out of every 10 voters say they have read all or part of the Democratic platform, as compared to fewer than 3 in 10 who read the Republican document. The civil rights plank in the Democratic platform seems to have aroused particular attention.

To test public interest in the Democratic platform the institute put the following question to a cross-section of voters in all parts of the country:

Did you happen to read the Democratic Party platform drawn up at their convention in Philadelphia?

A similar poll on the Republican platform was reported early this month. A comparison follows:

	Dem. Platform	Rep. Platform
Yes, all of it	7%	7%
Yes, only part of it	32	21
No, not any of it	61	72

Those voters who said they had paid some attention to the Democratic platform were then asked a series of questions concerning its contents, such as "Will you tell me what the platform says about civil rights? About housing? About prices?"

The results show that nearly two out of three persons who had read the platform remembered the major ideas in the civil rights plank, which promises to work toward ending all racial or religious discrimination and pledges abolition of poll taxes, antilynching legislation and other civil rights reforms.

The planks on housing and on prices got somewhat less attention, with nearly half unable to remember what the platform said about housing.

It seems clear from these results that presidential campaign platforms get comparatively little attention from the mass of voters.

But the contents of a platform may have a highly significant bearing on the behavior of special interests or minority groups, as witness the anti-Truman revolt in the South, which stems largely from the President's stand on civil rights.

Had the Democratic platform been less forthright on civil rights, some political observers think that the rump convention of Southern Democrats who nominated their own ticket might not have taken place.

Tomorrow—First report on how the three principal candidates for President, President Truman, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Henry A. Wallace, stand at the opening of the campaign.

Colombia Reports U. S. Plan for Canal

Bogota, Colombia, July 30 (U.P.).—Foreign Minister Eduardo Zuleta Angel said today the United States has suggested to the Colombian government that a second inter-ocean canal be dug through northwestern Colombia.

Angel said details of the American proposal would be disclosed in an official statement after they have been studied by the foreign relations committees of both houses of the Colombian Congress.

El Tiempo, Colombia's leading newspaper, said the plans involved construction of a canal using the Atrato and Trando Rivers.

Biffle to Make Preelection 6-State Poll

The Biffle Poll, a one-man sampling of public opinion, will make a pre-election survey of six Ohio and Mississippi River Valley States as soon as the special session of Congress is ended.

Leslie L. Biffle, secretary of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee and close friend of President Truman, plans to undertake the poll incognito—in the guise of a farmer, chicken salesman or hitchhiker.

The bantamweight Biffle initiated his personal polling of people last fall in a swing—a hitchhike—that took him into Wisconsin, western New York and Rhode Island.

His latest pulse-taking expedition will take him into West Virginia, southern Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Kentucky.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Penalty For Liberalism

THE TEMPER of the Congressmen in special session is described as "angry," "sullen," "surly." There are unquestionably members of the Eightieth Congress who have come back here in a pretty bitter frame of mind.

Childs

If you were Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio and you had to give up the peace and coolness of Murray Bay in Canada for the tussle of a session in Washington's summer heat, you wouldn't feel too happy about it. Or if you were Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., and you had to leave the pleasures of Cape Cod for a political hot spot, you would certainly not do any cheering.

For most members, however, and particularly those in the House, the recall comes as something of a relief. Back in the home district there is little peace for the average Congressman. He is at the mercy of the people about whom he talks so long and eloquently in the halls of Congress.

They want to tell him, for a change, what they think. Or they have a favor to ask. On top of this come endless requests to speak at this picnic and that rally; invitations which the candidate cannot refuse. He is also the prey of a legion of solicitors for worthy causes who expect him to contribute generously out of a salary that is regarded back home as inexhaustible.

So in the present interlude before the election begins, a great many members are pleased at finding a refuge in the Capital. The sound effects of anger and denunciation are largely for political purposes.

FOR SOME members, however, the special session imposes a serious penalty. It gives an opponent a perfect opportunity to make hay back home while the incumbent is sweating it out in Washington.

Representative Estes Kefauver of Tennessee is an example of one on whom the session imposes a severe handicap. In fact, he may be the outstanding example, for he is engaged in a tough fight to win the seat in the Senate now held by Senator Tom Stewart at the primary to be held in Tennessee next Thursday.

Kefauver is a liberal. He has consistently fought for the New Deal measures that have made such changes in his region. In many ways he typifies the changing South.

That is one reason why the bitter enemies of change are trying so hard to defeat him. Their big bass drum is Boss Ed Crump of Memphis. Crump has spent thousands of dollars in a series of full-page newspaper advertisements throughout the State to smear Kefauver as a "Red."

Crump is a resourceful and cunning politician who has long ruled Memphis as his own private principality. He is said to write the newspaper advertisements himself, subtly appealing to various kinds of prejudice. One instance of his smear technique is to show that on some measures Kefauver voted like Representative Vito Marcantonio and, therefore, Crump links Kefauver to communism and Wallace.

Unfortunately for Boss Crump, the candidate of his choice, Judge John A. Mitchell of Cookeville, is not doing too well in a three-cornered race. Consequently, the boss may have to switch his support to Senator Stewart, the third contestant. Stewart has had a colorless career, for the most part following the lead of Tennessee's feuding patronage hunter, Senator Kenneth McKellar

UNTIL THE session called him back, Kefauver was waging a marathon campaign that had brought him substantial gains, according to reports from the State. He has spoken in virtually all of Tennessee's 95 counties, often getting so far back into the hills that his office here could not reach him on the telephone.

His campaign is in the rugged frontier tradition. At every crossroads he strides up and down the street, shaking hands with young and old and asking them to vote for him on his record. It calls not merely for strong nerves, but for lusty lungs and stout underpinnings. Here is no air-conditioned campaign train with the appearances of the candidate carefully stage-managed.

The Democratic victor in the primary is certain to face a tough fight in the fall, whether it is Kefauver or one of the Crump pets. The surge of Republican confidence has raised high hopes that the border States and even the Solid South can be cracked.

Evidence of that confidence is the candidacy of Carroll Reece, who resigned as Republican national chairman when Gov. Thomas E. Dewey was nominated. Reece, who represented the First District of Tennessee in Congress for 26 years, recently announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for the Senate.

If Kefauver should oppose Reece in November, the chances are that Boss Crump would support the Republican candidate. That is an indication of the way in which the cards are stacked against liberalism this year.

Dr. Bronk Is Named President Of Hopkins; Takes Office Jan. 1

Baltimore, July 30 (AP). — Dr. Detlev Wulf Bronk, physicist and physiologist at the University of Pennsylvania, will assume the presidency of Johns Hopkins University January 1, 1949, the university announced today.

Carlyle Barton, president of the board of trustees, said Dr. Bronk's appointment was approved unanimously by the board of trustees at a meeting Wednesday night. Dr. Bronk accepted the appointment, he said.

The likelihood of his appointment became known yesterday when he visited the Hopkins campus. University sources acknowledged he was among the half dozen candidates chosen from an original list of about 125.

He will succeed Dr. Isaiah Bowman, renowned geographer who asked last March that he be permitted to retire before the beginning of another school term. President of Hopkins since 1935, Dr. Bowman will be 70 in December. He said anyone who survives the toil and tension of a position of high responsibility up to 70 is a "biological miracle."

Dr. Bronk is 51 and a native of New York. After serving as an ensign in the Naval Aviation Corps in 1918, he received his bachelor of arts degree from Swarthmore College in 1920.

In 1921, after serving briefly as assistant power engineer of a utility company and instructor of physics at the University of Pennsylvania, he went to the University of Michigan as instructor in physiology. While at Michigan, he received his master of science and doctor of philosophy degrees.

He returned to Swarthmore to fill various faculty capacities, becoming dean of men in 1927.

Dr. Bronk went to England in 1929 as a National Research Council fellow. On his return he became professor of biophysics and director of the Eldridge Reeves Johnson Foundation for Medical Physics at the University of Pennsylvania. He is now serving as chairman of the National Research Council, a position that Dr. Bowman held at the time of his appointment to the presidency of Johns Hopkins.

He has maintained a home in Washington as well as at Hill House Farm, Media, Pa., in recent years because of his scientific work with various Government departments.

In 1942 he was named coordinator of research for the air surgeon's office at Air Force Headquarters.

Sugar Situation Takes On Rosy Hue in Cuba

Havana, Cuba, July 30 (AP).—In Cuba, the sugar situation turned from gloom to joy today. It was learned that the United States Army is considering purchase of about 325,000 short tons, in addition to the one million tons already bought, for use in occupied areas abroad. This would leave an apparent surplus of less than 500,000 tons, with five months left to sell it, and prospects good.

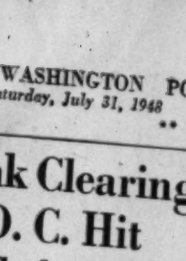
PARTY FOR OFFICIAL: Clifford P. Carpenter, purchasing agent of the Washington Gas Light Co., was honored with a party held last night at the Shoreham Hotel and attended by more than 200 friends and associates.



Carpenter

Occasion of the party was the announcement of Carpenter's retirement from the gas company after 41 years of service, spanning over a third of the company's 100-year existence. Joining the company on August 2, 1907, he has served as its purchasing agent since 1918. High light of the evening was the presentation of farewell gifts which included a scroll bearing some 200 signatures together with a television set.

Carpenter, who will be 65 in November, was born and reared in Washington and attended Georgetown University Law School. Before joining the gas company he worked on the staff of the former Washington Times. After his retirement he plans to remain in Washington residing at his home on Meadow la., Chevy Chase.

RETAIL TRADE: Department store sales in Washington in the week ended July 24 showed an increase of 4 per cent over the corresponding total for 1947, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. Sales in the district served by the bank were 4 per cent greater. Sales in Washington showed a gain of 1 per cent over the preceding week but the district showed no chonge.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Warren S. Stone, a representative of the New York Life Insurance Co. in this city has been named a member of the 1948 Nylic Top Club Council, an organization of the company's 200 foremost members of its field force . . . American Wholesalers of Washington has appointed Darwin H. Shopoff advertising and sales promotion manager . . . Thomas E. Boyle has joined the Lewis Advertising Agency as an account executive . . . Herbert E. Brownell, jr., manager of the Dewey campaign for the Presidency, and Hans A. Eggers, president of the Continental Can Co., have been elected directors of the National Retailers Mutual Insurance Co.

EARNINGS: The Pennsylvania Railroad reported yesterday its net income for the first six months of 1948 was three million dollars less than in the same period last year. A spokesman said PRR has been "caught in the march of inflation. We just haven't been able to get our income up as high as our outgo."

For the first half of this year, PRR reported a net income of $653,921, equal to 5 cents per common share. For the same period of 1947, the report showed $3,790,986, and 29 cents.

'Soviet Conquest' Blueprint Is Found

Frankfurt, July 30 (NYHT).—A 20-page document, which purportedly shows how the Soviet armies will conquer all Germany, described as the work of the planning staff of the War Academy at Leningrad, is being studied with great interest by American military experts at European command headquarters.

The document is "a basically sound military action," said one officer.

It is believed to be one of three things: a Soviet "plant" designed as subtle propaganda to frighten American and European public opinion; a "plant" engineered by an unknown German group designed to increase tension between the Russians and the western powers; or the faint possibility that it is actually a legitimate leakage of Soviet planning. All information available seems to point to the first possibility.

A self-confessed former German Communist, Frederich Dohmel, who lived in the Russian zone, provided the document. He claims he got it from a group of anti-Soviet Russian military government officers.

The document consists of excerpts of "the great plan," which supposedly is the overall plan covering the Soviet military, political and economic operations in the conquest of western Europe. In it is the alleged disclosure that the Russians plan to overrun western Germany, but not to violate the frontiers of France, the Saar, Switzerland, Luxembourg, Holland, Belgium and Denmark. This plan points out "however, the above limit of the thrust is provisional."

The plan outlines military action by three Russian groups; North, Central and south. The northern group sweeps westward to the Dutch border and northwest to the Danish frontier. The central group has the task of seizing the Ruhr, jumping the Rhine River to the Belgium, French and Luxembourg borders. It also cuts across the northern part of the American zone and is responsible for capturing Frankfurt, the American military capital. The southern army group moves out of Czechoslovakia, across the broad reaches of Bavaria and the mountainous valleys of Austria, to the Swiss border and to the Rhine.

Halt U. S. Flights

28 MATS Planes Bound For Berlin

The Military Air Transport Command disclosed yesterday that its regular transcontinental service has been suspended to make large transport planes available for use in supplying Russian-blockaded Berlin.

MATS headquarters said this would make 28 planes available.

The transcontinental service consists of eight flights weekly from Washington to San Francisco.

Service on the "U routes" are also being discontinued. The "U routes" extend from Washington to Biloxi, and Jackson, Miss., Corpus Christi, Tex. and then to Fairfield-Suisun Field, outside San Francisco which is also the terminus on the Pacific Coast for the transcontinental route.

Twelve planes have been in service on the "U route" which is flown on Sunday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Sixteen planes were used on the direct transcontinental line.

Soviet Seeks Trade Control

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, July 30 (NYHT).—Russia again challenged the sovereignty of the western powers in their own sectors of Berlin today by announcing creation of a "Greater Berlin Trading Corporation" to control west-sector trade not only within Germany but also with foreign nations.

For the first time, the Russians promised west-sector firms to supply fuel, electric power and raw materials as inducements for permitting the "Greater Berlin Trade Corporation" to handle the sale of all their finished products, thus guaranteeing a market.

This Soviet proposal appears to directly violate standing economic orders of Britain and the United States, an American military government spokesman said tonight.

West-sector firms, which were supposed to obtain their new notes in the most recent Berlin currency exchange, have been informed by the Soviet-controlled municipal bank that their funds have been blocked indefinitely. It has been suggested that the funds would be unblocked only for firms cooperating with the Soviet trade plans.

Thus, unless the western allies come to the rescue by redeeming the blocked funds with their deutschmarks, the west-sector firms that have money in Soviet-sector banks are threatened with bankruptcy.

Red Bloc Deals Blow to West

the opening round of the first important international conference in which Russia and her Communist neighbors control a majority of the vote. Russia and the other eastern nations, including Yugoslavia, demonstrated their solidarity with that control.

Even before the first test of the conference, which will determine the future control of central Europe's 1800-mile water highway, Ambassador Cavendish Cannon served notice the United States will not use the veto to block decisions.

Thus, there seemed to be little chance of avoiding Danube decisions to which the western powers are opposed, unless they get a two-thirds rule and voting privileges for Austria. So far, Austria has only observer status.

A United States spokesman said Yugoslavia, in issuing invitations for the session, had furnished informal assurances that English as well as French and Russian would be accepted as the official language.

Cannon Expresses Hope

Cannon, chief American delegate, said American interest in the conference was as an occupying power of Germany, which has a direct interest in the Danube.

He expressed hope the conference would prove successful in making Europe's key waterway free to commerce.

West May Try To See Stalin

Minister Valerian A. Zorin, believed at present in charge of the Soviet Foreign Ministry. It is thought at Moscow that the three western powers have top-level talks in mind, in view of the importance attached by them to the recent tripartite talks at London.

How long it will be necessary to wait for Molotov's return is not known.

The Soviet press published today reports suggesting that the position of the western powers in Berlin is continuing to weaken. One report said the British had begun removing westward by plane the household furnishings of British nationals. Another report spoke of rumors that Gen. Joseph-Pierre Koenig, French military governor in Germany, intended to resign because of alleged bad treatment of him by Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor.

India Accused Of Invasion By Hyderabad

Hyderabad, July 29 (Delayed) (U.P.).—Indian troops have wrecked one Hyderabad village and occupied another in "grave, flagrant violation of the territorial integrity of Hyderabad," the government charged today.

The government of this independent state has protested to the Indian government at New Delhi. India has been attempting to persuade the Nizam (ruler) of Hyderabad to agree to annex his state to the Indian dominion.

The City of Hyderabad, meanwhile, fought a cholera epidemic. Two hundred cases and 15 deaths were reported yesterday.

Korea Asks U. S. for Arms For Defense

Lake Success, N. Y., July 30 (U.P.).—The American-sponsored Korean government has asked the United States for arms and ammunition to defend itself against possible attack from the Soviet-occupied northern half of the country, it was disclosed today.

Miss Louise Yim, representative to the United Nations of the newly formed South Korean government, said the request for military aid had been submitted to the State Department.

Miss Yim said Korea also requested immediate recognition as a sovereign state.

Red Underground Elections 'Secret'

Seoul, Korea, July 30 (U.P.).—The United States Army reported today that the Communist underground "elections" scheduled for the American-occupied zone of Korea will be so secret "the voters won't even know the candidate for whom they vote."

After the ballots are marked, the Labor Party chiefs will write in the name of the candidate, according to intelligence reports.

Principals in Hungarian Crisis

Arpad Szakasits Victor Csornoky Zoltan Tildy

President Tildy of Hungary resigned yesterday after the Communist-dominated government had arrested Csornoky, his son-in-law and minister to Egypt, on charges of espionage and treason. It was expected that Szakasits, former Socialist leader and now chairman of the Labor Party, would become president ernment shakeup, aimed principally at the few Smallholders still in office.

The purge in the Agriculture Ministry, which resulted in the retirement or resignation of 143 officials in addition to those arrested, effectively broke the hold of the Smallholders Party on the only government department under their control.

Another Step in Decline

The action represented another step in the Smallholders decline from the country's most powerful party. The 1945 elections gave them 2,500,000 votes—60 per cent of the total. Tildy, as leader of the party, became Premier. When he became President, Smallholder Ferenc Nagy took over as Prime Minister.

In May, 1947, Nagy was ousted and fled the country as the result of an alleged revolutionary plot. In August of that year, the Communists swept the national elections, with the aid of "flying squads" which foreign observers said engineered vote frauds.

The Smallholders, running second in the 1947 election, received only 15 per cent of the total vote.

Until his resignation today, Tildy, 59, was the only major political leader in eastern Europe who was neither a Communist nor a fellow traveler, and he was the only European chief of state who was trained for the church, as a minister of the Calvinist Church.

Tildy helped found the Smallholders Party in 1930 and long was a member of Parliament. During the German occupation he went underground and concluded a pact of cooperation with the Communists and Socialists. This pact was the basis of the coalition government that emerged after the war.

Better Money Basis Sought For Marshall Plan Trade

A two-point program to hasten restoration of currency exchange in Western Europe, and establish the long-range policies of the European recovery program was brought back from Paris by Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman yesterday.

He proposed a plan for a "broader and more thorough currency clearance" arrangement between the 16 Western European nations participating in the Marshall Plan.

The currency plan is designed, Hoffman said, "from our desire to see European resources fully utilized, and to see that the first call is made upon European resources before a call is made upon non-European resources."

"At the present time," he added, "the principal barrier to trade within Europe, and therefore, the principal difficulty for one European nation to make use of the resources of another country, is the barrier presented by the shortages of the foreign exchange among those countries."

For several months the Bank for International Settlements at Basel, Switzerland, has been acting as clearing agent between the European countries. Because some countries have been "persistent debtors" and others "persistent creditors" of the clearing agency, the system has bogged down until all settlements between nations are called for in dollars.

To overcome this, it is proposed to fund or stabilize these existing debts, by creditor nations extending long-term credits to debtor nations.

The next step is extending "indirect aid" to the "persistent debtors." The plan was explained as follows:

"If France continues to run a deficit in its trade with Belgium, ECA will grant a so-called conditional or supplementary allotment for granting aid to Belgium. The Belgian government will set up a drawing account of equivalent value in Belgian currency, available to the French government.

"France thus will be enabled to use this indirect ECA assistance to finance its trade deficit with Belgium."

In other words, France will get Belgian currency instead of American dollars, which will encourage it to trade with Belgium instead of with the United States.

"Our aim is to put an end to dollar-trading in Europe," Hoffman said.

Details are still to be worked out, Hoffman said—notably the problem of currency controls in the sterling area.

Programming of the ECA operations will begin at once. By September 30 ECA hopes to have a complete program for the first year's ECA assistance, taking into consideration the aid already sent.

By the end of the year it hopes to have next year's program—the year starting April 1—worked out, and also a "program stated in terms of broad objectives for the full four-year period provided in the Foreign Assistance Act."

Each of the European nations will work out its program first. These will be submitted to the council of the 16 nations in Paris. This council will screen these programs, recommend the allotments of funds to each nation, and pass those recommendations on to Hoffman.

Once each nation's program has been approved, each participating country will negotiate direct with Hoffman's office here. ECA in Washington will determine how much of each country's program shall be in grants or in loans, and determine the procurement schedules.

Hoffman started out his conference by commenting upon the vast improvement in "the attitudes of Europe as contrasted with two years ago."

"Two years ago," he said, "when I covered Europe fairly well, I got the impression that the attitude among most of the people of most of the countries was one of bleak despair.

"I am talking now about the free peoples of Europe. They did not at that time seem to be too sure that they were going to remain free peoples too long.

"That attitude today has changed completely. There has been, I think, a rather dramatic recapture of hope.

"I was impressed by Dr. Gruber of Austria, whose country not only borders on Russia, but has Russian soldiers quartered inside its borders.

"Yet they are optimistic. They feel that they are not only going to remain a free people, but that they are going to have a greater recovery that will bring the greater prosperity.

"Even in Berlin the German people are indicating every desire to follow the western tradition instead of the eastern tradition."

The plans he brought back, Hoffman said, "inevitably will lead to a much greater cooperation between all the countries."

Trade Unions Warn ERP on Funds Use

London, July 30 (AP).—Trade union delegates representing millions of workers in the 16 Marshall Plan countries declared in a resolution tonight their fear that ERP funds may be used to reestablish old industrial dynasties such as the Krupp munitions firm.

Forty-five delegates ending a two-day convention pledged their support to the recovery program and recommended the appointment in each of the participating nations of a full-time official to specialize in ERP problems.

Western European labor leaders were told today they would be given "fudd sonbility" to sere as idisers in the European Reserve Program (ERP).

Jews Warned Arab Attacks May Resume

Jerusalem, July 30 (AP).—The Jewish commander in the Jerusalem area told the populace by radio today that Arab forces might launch full scale hostilities at any moment.

(Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok said in Tel Aviv the Jewish state plans immediate steps to place Jerusalem under Jewish sovereignty.)

The Arabs are blocking the Jerusalem water supply. They said also the Egyptian army has not yet signed an agreement fixing lines of demarcation in southern Jerusalem. The Trans-Jordan Arab Legion yesterday blocked a Jewish supply convoy traveling the main highway to Jerusalem under United Nations auspices.

Jews Report Bombings By Egyptian Planes

Tel Aviv, July 30 (NYHT).—Three Egyptian planes ranged over the southern front today, bombing Jewish convoy routes, and Israeli troops launched repeated counter-attacks south of the Majdal-Faluja line to regain heights lost since the truce began.

Israeli general headquarters described the situation as "increasingly serious" and a government representative said U. N. truce observers had not halted Egyptian aggression. Jewish officials promised the attacks would continue until their convoy route to the Negeb settlements was again open.

U. S. Retains Custody of Seized Planes

Camden, N. J., July 30 (U.P.).—A motion to release from Government custody two Constellation airplanes seized July 13 on grounds that they were to be flown to Israel was denied today in United States District Court here.

The four-engined aircraft were claimed by A. W. Schwimmer, president of Service Airways Co., New York.

United States Attorney Grover C. Richmond said Schwimmer was a "front for a Jewish organization seeking to send arms and airplanes" to Israel. He charged the planes were to be flown to Palestine in violation of the presidential embargo on arms shipments.

Richmond added he would start proceedings for condemnation of the planes August 13.

Bar Unit Urges Felony Court On 24-Hour, 7-Day Schedule

made by a subcommittee headed by Edward Burling, jr., and approved 7-3 by the full civil rights committee, headed by John Wattawa.

Dissenting were Wattawa, who was chairman of the District delegation to the recent Democratic National Convention; Claude A. Thompson, member of Burling's subcommittee, and Hilary W. Costello, member of the full committee.

Also announced yesterday was the final report of a subcommittee on loyalty investigations for Government employes, headed by Costello, and a subcommittee on racial relations, headed by J. Paull Marshall.

In the loyalty study, the subcommittee said it received only two complaints, found to be unfounded. However, this report warned of two "repugnant" dangers:

". . . the possibility of the executive department emulating the legislative department in its tendency to establish a policy of guilt by imputation of beliefs or guilt by association, and the failure to afford the employe in every instance an opportunity to cross-examine witnesses . . .

"This is a plain danger that demands our constant vigilance."

Suggests Committee Action

The racial relations subcommittee recommended that "the question of racial eligibility for membership to the Bar Association . . . should be placed on the agenda of the full committee for consideration and action."

The subcommittee deemed it "not advisable at this time" to act on general policy involving the general policy of discrimination "such as segregation in schools or other public places."

Civil Rights Committee Chairman Wattawa yesterday said he voted against the proposed code revision for suspected felonies because no emergency then existed for the "rather abrupt change," which "could lend encouragement to the lawless elements because of its accompanying criticism of police methods."

Rule 5 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, effective in 1947 in all United States District Courts, Wattawa said, provides for felony arraignments in arrests with or without a warrant before the nearest hearing officer "without unnecessary delay."

He said the proposal to permit a judge or magistrate to commit persons to jail for up to 24 hours before being formally charged conflicts with Federal rules.

Considers Rules "Ample"

Thompson, in his dissent to the proposed code change, said present provisions are "ample to protect all," adding:

"We cannot hope for a Utopia in the police as a whole . . . Many policemen are already too apprehensive that they may err in making arrests . . . There should be a fearless, as well as a law abiding, police force."

In a lengthy dissent, Costello, like Wattawa, referred to the Federal rule and called the "forthwith" arraignment proposal "clearly arbitrary, capricious and impractical."

Costello termed the proposal to hold some persons up to 24 hours "an abortive attempt to temporarily suspend the privilege of the write of habeas corpus . . ." The proposal, he said, would make one form of procedure for cases without warrants, and another procedure where a warrant is issued, creating "confusion."

"It is virtually inconceivable," he said, that a civil rights committee of any bar association would be so naive as to recommend the enactment of legislation that would be so violative of so many rights of so many people."

In addition to Burling, the majority report on the code amendment was approved by Arthur D. Condon and Nathan L. Silberberg of the subcommittee, and J. Paull Marshall, Fred P. Myers, B. Tracy Ansell and Elizabeth R. Young.

Lowry N. Coe, elected Bar Association president on June 8, said yesterday he had not yet been able to study the report or discuss future action on it. Next meeting of the association will be in September.

MacArthur's Proposed Ban On Strikes Riles Jap Unions

Tokyo, July 30 (U.P.).—Japanese labor closed ranks today for determined—although indirect—resistance to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's labor policy in Japan.

Four hundred thousand government communications workers threatened to leave their jobs if a proposed law forbidding civil service strikes is enacted.

The powerful government and municipal workers union voted to submit a petition tomorrow opposing the no-strike law "suggested" by MacArthur in a letter to Premier Hitoshi Ashida.

Other labor groups said they would appeal to the Supreme Court, charging the law would violate Japan's new constitution.

All of the groups were careful not to make any direct attack on MacArthur or the occupying powers.

The Japanese press, fearing a possible crackdown by Allied censors, made no mention of the dispute. Japanese learned of the situation either by word of mouth, or through the Army newspaper, Stars and Stripes.

Flags Emphasize Scope of Cathedral

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

The national nature of the Washington Cathedral is emphasized each week when the flag of one of the States or territories is carried in the procession at Sunday services.

Sunday at 11 a. m. and at 4 p. m. the flag of Wisconsin will be carried, and prayers offered for the people and government of that State. In many Episcopal churches in Wisconsin, rectors, knowing of the ceremony, will offer prayers for the progress of the great cathedral here.

It was in 1933 that the first State flags arrived at the cathedral. In 1939 the colorful collection was completed when the flag of Alaska was dedicated.

For a time the banners were hung in the Great Choir, but today they hang from the triforium gallery in the North Transept. Eventually, they will probably be moved to the Patriots Transept, now under construction.

The flags were donated by individuals and groups from the States. In some cases the banners were given by the State societies here.

In 1934 the flag of Maryland was presented to the cathedral by Baltimore Chapter of the Colonial Dames of America in memory of Queen Anne of England. She was honored for her "loving kindness" to the Episcopal Church in the State during the Colonial period.

The home States of three of the Presidents have chosen to honor them with the State flags. They are: Virginia, whose flag was given in memory of Woodrow Wilson, who is buried at the Cathedral; New York, in memory of Theodore Roosevelt, and Illinois, which commemorates Abraham Lincoln.

Admiral Dewey of Manila Bay fame, also buried at the cathedral, is honored by the State of Vermont, and North Carolina sent its flag in memory of Walter Hines Page, World War I Ambassador to England.

The Massachusetts flag was given in memory of the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, sr., and the Missouri banner in memory of the late Speaker of the House, Champ Clark. Mrs. Guy D. Goff presented the West Virginia flag to the cathedral in memory of her husband, the late Senator Guy D. Goff. The Nevada flag was given as a tribute to the late Senator Francis G. Newlands.

In addition, three Confederate generals, a missionary among the Indians of the Southwest, "Oregon Pioneers," and relatives of the donors are commemorated. The Boy Scouts of America presented the District banner to the cathedral.

The plan of carrying the flags in the service was launched by former Pennsylvania Senator George Wharton Pepper, oldest member of the cathedral chapter or board of trustees. It was initiated while the late Right Rev. James E. Freeman was still Bishop of Washington.

In addition to the flags of the 48 States, those of Alaska, Hawaii, and the District of Columbia are also carried. No flag is carried on Easter Sunday, so the cathedral comes out even for the year.

Flags are carried in order of admission of the States to the Union, starting with the original colonies and ending with the Territories and the District. Two students from St. Albans School each year are elected flag bearers.

Cathedral Flag Ceremony

STATES HONORED—Flag bearers stand before the altar at Washington Cathedral with flags of the United States and the State of Wisconsin, as they will during services Sunday. They are David B. Tate, 3039 Q st. nw. (left), and Tillman Stirling, 3103 Garfield st. nw. A different State is thus honored each week

To Hold Communion Rites

The Rev. J. J. Queally, rector of Transfiguration Episcopal Church, 1415 Gallatin st. nw. has returned from his vacation and will conduct Holy Communion services at 8 and 11 a. m. Sunday.

Starts Sunday

15th St. S.E. Church Gets New Pastor

The Rev. David L. Watterworth will begin his duties as pastor of the Fifteenth Street Christian Church, 15th st. and Kentucky ave. se., at 10:30 a. m. Sunday.

Mr. Watterworth will be introduced to the congregation by the Rev. Verval Smith, minister pro tem. The church has been without a full-time minister since the first of the year, when the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers resigned because of ill health.

The new pastor was educated at Cincinnati Bible Seminary, Valparaiso University, and Butler University. He did pastoral work in Kentucky while still a student and later served in Rodney and West Lorne, Ontario, and Hebron, Ind. He comes here from Marion, Ind., where he was director of youth activities at the First Christian Church.

World Council Of Churches To Be Formed

Late in August a World Council of Churches, with representatives of 150 church bodies from 40 countries, will be formed in Amsterdam, Holland.

When the first assembly of the World Council gathers in Amsterdam, Holland, representatives of 28 American denominations will be present. The total American delegation, including delegates, alternate delegates, consultants, youth and accredited visitors and staff will be over 300.

Included in this group will be a number of Washingtonians.

Dr. Reissig at Geneva

Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, has been at the Geneva headquarters of the council since early January. He is on leave of absence from the federation to act as public relations officer for the world council.

Dr. Fred Sherman Buschmeyer, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, will attend the sessions and later will tour Congregational relief centers in Austria, Germany and Poland before returning to Washington in September.

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington and president of the Washington Federation of Churches, will also attend the meetings. He has been in London for the past month attending the Lambeth Conference of Anglican Bishops.

Youth Group Represented

Representing the youth group of the National Baptist Convention at the meetings will be Dr. Walter O. Lewis. Dr. Lewis left here early in June and will remain in Europe after the World Council meetings as associate secretary of the Baptist World Alliance, in charge of relief work.

Others who will attend the sessions are: the Rev. Delmar L. Dyreson of the General Commission on Chaplains, the Rev. Orris G. Robinson, pastor of Calvary Methodist Church, Dr. J. Hillman Hollister, pastor of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, Miss A. B. Wiegand, of the Lutheran Home for the Aged, Miss Gwendolyn E. Pitts, Dr. W. H. Jernagin, and D. Stewart Patterson, executive secretary of the Methodist Commission on Chaplains.

Pastor to Visit Dutch Church Aided Here

A small Dutch town this week is preparing for a visit from two American friends, Dr. J. Hillman Hollister, pastor of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, and Mrs. Hollister.

The little town is Hedel, which was once devastated by Nazi bombers and which was adopted by the congregation of Dr. Hollister's church almost three years ago.

Dr. and Mrs. Hollister will sail from Hoboken today for a visit to the community and to the first assembly of the World Council of Churches.

The trip to Europe was given the Hollisters by the church three years ago when Dr. Hollister completed 20 years as pastor. He and his wife have been "saving" it for something special ever since.

After a week in London they will go to Hedel for two days. There they will see the town's Protestant Reformed Church, which was rebuilt through the assistance of the General Restoration Fund of the Presbyterian Church and of the Chevy Chase Congregation.

The Hollisters will meet the many people who have corresponded with their church members, and will see how the 130 packing cases of food and machinery sent there have been used.

Dr. Hollister last year received a silver medal from the Dutch government for aid to the war-stricken town given by his church. Later, the Dutch community sent their Chevy Chase friends some 2000 tulip bulbs as a gesture of thanks.

After their visit in Hedel the Hollisters will go to Amsterdam, where Dr. Hollister will be an official visitor at the meeting of the World Council of Churches which opens August 22. Delegates from 148 church bodies in 42 countries will gather for the meetings.

Dr. and Mrs. Hollister will sail for home on September 4.

National City Christian Church To Be on Radio

Services at National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, will be broadcast over station WINX during the month of August.

Sunday Dr. J. Warren Hastings, pastor, will deliver the first of five sermons based on the Gospel of John under the general theme "Christianity's Cardinal Principles." The church service begins at 10:50 a. m.

The Rev. Robert E. Lee, pastor of St. Luke's Lutheran Church, Silver Spring, will conduct the "Look to This Day" broadcast over station WRC at 12:15 p. m. Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday.

The "Radio Edition of the Bible" will be heard over station WASH-FM on Friday at 4 p. m.

Sunday CHURCH EVENTS

The Rev. Beverley M. Boyd of Richmond will preach at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, at 11 a. m.

BOYD

Dr. Boyd is executive secretary of the department of church and social work of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. He also is editor of the Southern Churchman and has held pastorates in Virginia, Texas and North Carolina.

He studied at Washington and Lee and the University of Virginia and is a graduate of the Virginia Theological Seminary.

Dr. L. Ralph Tabor, pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church, will speak on "The Inside of the Church" at 11 a. m. At the 9 a. m. matins service the Rev. James M. Singer, assistant pastor, will speak on "God's Spirit Is Given for Profit."

Dr. Alfred T. DeGroot, dean of Chapman College, Los Angeles, will speak at Ninth Street Christian Church, 9th and D sts. ne., at 10:30 a. m. Dr. DeGroot formerly was a member of the Ninth Street Church, and is now on his way to the first assembly of the World Council of Churches.

The Rev. George H. Yount, former asssitant minister of the National Presbyterian Church, 1764 N st. nw., will be guest preacher there at 11 a. m. He will speak on "Taking God at His Word."

Mr. Yount, who is now pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Arlington, Va., was assistant pastor of the National Presbyterian Church from 1942 until 1944. He is a graduate of Washington and Jefferson College and Princeton Theological Seminary.

At Hamline Methodist Church, 4501 16th st. nw., Dr. A. P. Wilson will preach at 11 a. m. on "What We Mean to Christ." Dr. Wilson, formerly pastor of Columbia Heights Christian Church here, is now pastor of the Christian Church at Cadiz, Ky.

Park Road Community Church, 1019 Park rd. nw., will observe its seventeenth anniversary Sunday at an 11 a. m. Holy Communion service. The Rev. Oscar L. Rand, pastor, will preach on "A Wise Master Builder."

Prof. Bright To Be Guest Speaker Here

Dr. John Bright, professor of Hebrew and Old Testament interpretation at Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va., will speak at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday at Central Presbyterian Church, 15th and Irving sts. nw.

BRIGHT

Dr. Bright is the first of four guest ministers who will occupy the pulpit at Central Presbyterian while the pastor, Dr. Graham Gordon Lacy, is on vacation.

After his graduation from Union Seminary in 1931, Dr. Bright was awarded the Moses Hoge Fellowship and remained there as an instructor in Greek and Hebrew until 1935.

During the following five years he studied Old Testament at Johns Hopkins University, from which he received a Ph.D. degree. He was twice a member of archeological expenditures to Palestine and also served pastorates in Durham, N. C., and Catonsville, Md.

Dr. Bright returned to the seminary in 1940 as professor of Old Testament, and shortly afterward left there to serve as an Army chaplain. He was with combat outfits in France, Belgium and Germany.

In 1945 he was released from the Army and returned to the seminary.

Gospel Group On U. S. Tour Will Sing Here

The Lutheran Gospel Quartet of Fergus Falls, Minn., will sing at the Lutheran Church of the Atonement, North Capitol st. and Rhode Island ave., Wednesday at 8 p. m.

The quartet is on a 20,000-mile concert tour this summer and will make appearances in 46 States, according to the Rev. Paul L. Reaser, pastor of the church.

This is the second tour of the country the group has made since 1946, he said. Their program will include gospel songs, spirituals and original hymns. The concert is free and a collection will be taken.

The foursome is composed of alumni of the Lutheran Bible School of Fergus Falls, a theological and preparatory school of the Church of the Lutheran Brethren of America. The quartet is representing the school while on the tour.

Foundry Church Preacher

The Rev. Joseph Clare Hoffman of Christ Methodist Church, Charleston, W. Va., will preach at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday at Foundry Methodist Church, 16th and P sts. nw.

GRACE, The CROSS and The LAW

Does God's marvelous grace excuse Christians from the obligation to keep the Ten Commandments? Did no one live under grace in the Old Testament? Is everyone, regardless of how they live, under grace today? Is there grace for the vilest sinner?

Potomac Pollution Study Requested

A study of Potomac River pollution from Key Bridge to Great Falls was requested yesterday by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The planning group called on the United States Public Health Service to make the study as a step in improving the river for recreation.

Commission Chairman Ulysses S. Grant, 3d, said that the health service will be asked to study sources of pollution with a view to eliminating them. Progress on the George Washington Memorial Parkway makes it imperative that pollution be reduced, he said.

The commission concluding its two-day monthly meeting also adopted a plan for the redevelopment of Marshall Heights, a development at Benning rd., and the District line, and went on record as favoring the elimination of street car tracks on Pennsylvania ave., between 7th st. nw. and the Capitol, providing a satisfactory rerouting scheme can be worked out.

Plans for redeveloping Marshall Heights include revamping of the layout of streets to eliminate serious grading difficulties which under the present plan place some houses as much as 20 feet above and 20 feet below street level, General Grant said. Redevelopment will increase land use two or three fold and will designate areas for schools and playgrounds, he said.

The commission also called on Congress to pass legislation transferring the Suitland Parkway from the Department of the Army to the National Parks Service. The Army will be requested to withdraw its declaration that the parkway is surplus if legislation cannot be pushed through the present session, General Grant said.

The Army, which built the Suitland Parkway, a dual roadway to link Bolling and Andrews airfields, has asked War Assets Administration to dispose of the property.

From 45 States

Boys' Forum Convened at American U.

The American Legion Boys Forum of National Government got under way yesterday as youngsters from all parts of the country arrived at American University.

Ninety high school boys from 45 States are scheduled to participate in the third annual affair, ending August 5, and most of them had arrived at the campus in time for dinner.

Greeting the boys, Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, said, "I welcome you to the city where everybody pays taxes and nobody votes.

"Washington is a political community where everybody belongs to somebody back home and can stay here only so long as he keeps his influence back home," he told the youths, who have come to get practical instruction in operation of Government.

After orientation talks, the boys settled down last night to organizing the Boys' Forum Senate and the mock national conventions of the "Federalists" and "Nationalists."

Today, beginning at 9 a. m., the boys will tour the Capitol and other points of interest and hear Representative Bertram W. Gearhart (R., Calif.) and Representative Earl C. Michener (R., Mich.) speak in the Old House Office Building. At 7:30 p. m. the boys will continue their party conventions.

The District of Columbia, Minnesota, Colorado and Rhode Island are not represented. They did not hold preliminary "Boys' State" meetings.

Justice Rutledge To Face Traffic Court in Denver

Denver, July 30 (AP).—Justice Wiley Rutledge of the United States Supreme Court was charged, in Denver's traffic court today with reckless driving and taking the right-of-way.

The 54-year-old jurist, who has been vacationing at Boulder, Colo., the past three weeks, was driving a car involved in a collision in a residential area here yesterday.

Patrolman Paul Mayerle said Mrs. Virginia-Slaughenhaup, 36, of Denver, an expectant mother, was slightly injured in the accident. She was riding in the other vehicle.

Denver attorney Lowell White, representing Rutledge, said the Justice would appear before Traffic Judge Hubert D. Henry "just like any other citizen involved in a misfortune."

Explosion Kills 7 In Alabama Mine; Other Pits Down

Birmingham, Ala., July 30 (U.P.).—Seven persons were known dead tonight in the explosion of a coal mine here and miners refused to enter three other pits owned by the same company. Twelve were injured.

The death toll climbed to seven as four more bodies were removed from the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co.'s Edgewater mine, which was blasted by a gas explosion earlier today.

Tonight, three of the company's other mines were shut down and two more operated on partial shifts because of a shortage of workers.

Senator Flanders Heads Air Affairs Society Board

Senator Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.) was elected chairman of the Board of Trustees of the International Society of Air Affairs yesterday, William D. Pardridge, president of the society, announced.

The society, a nonprofit organization that studies the social effects of aviation also elected the following members to the Board of Trustees: Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), Francis A. Callery of Lehman Brothers, Senator Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.), W. J. Bryan Dorn (D., S. C.), Arthur Godfrey, Columbia Broadcasting System; W. R. Hearst, jr., publisher, New York Journal-American; Representative Carl Hinshaw (R., Calif.), Palmer Hoyt, publisher, Denver Post; William P. MacCracken, jr., Washington, D. C.; Representative William Miller (R., Conn.) and Frank A. Tichenor, editor and publisher Aero Digest.

Plan Joint Maneuvers

Tokyo, July 30 (U.P.).—American, British and Australian ships and planes will get together off the Japanese coast August 2 and 3 for joint maneuvers, United States Naval Headquarters announced today.

6 Die in Plane Crash

Paris, July 30 (U.P.).—The French press agency reported from Saigon, Indo-China, that six persons were burned to death today when a French military plane crashed into a hill northwest of Hanoi.

Police Charge Strike Pickets

DISORDER FLARES—Dayton, Ohio, police are shown charging scattering pickets after fighting broke out at the Univis Lens plant yesterday while nonstricking employes were being escorted into the factory

Dayton Strike Clash Brings Ohio Governor

Dayton, Ohio, July 30 (AP).—A new burst of fighting, smothered in tear gas, brought Gov. Thomas J. Herbert of Ohio here today to try to help find some way to end Dayton's bitterest strike.

City officials already had asked and then canceled a plea for the Governor to send troops to prevent more violence in the 86-day-old strike of the United Electrical Workers at the little Univis Lens Co. plant.

The Governor brought Adjutant General Chester W. Goble for an afternoon meeting with Mayor Louis Lohrey, City Manager Russel E. McClure, Police Chief Rudolph Wurstner, City Law Director Herbert Beane and Montgomery County Sheriff Ben Smith. The Governor hoped to talk to Lou Kaplan, burly director of the strike, and other union officials later.

The meetings were called as a result of a wild five minutes just before 8 a. m. (EST) when fist fights broke out between nonstrikers, trying to get into the plant under police protection, the strikers and policemen.

More than 160 of the latter were on duty, helped by a dozen sheriff's deputies. Chief Wurstner estimated the crowd numbered 15,000, although union officials placed it at only 6000.

At least a dozen tear gas grenades were tossed into the knots of fighting men and women and the fighters came out streaming tears and sweat.

The climax of the melee came when an officer identified by Kaplan as Sergt. Clifford Croft, jr., drew a gun as he attempted to arrest one picket who later gave his name as Henry Fry, 53.

Kaplan said a charge of assault to kill would be filed against Croft.

NLRB Rules For 2 Fired On 'Scab' Cry

By the United Press

The National Labor Relations Board ruled yesterday that workers who are called "scabs" and "suckers" for crossing union picket lines cannot force the discharge of strikers who called them such names.

It ordered the Wytheville, Va., Knitting Mills Co. to reinstate and pay back wages to Frances A. Cox and Nettie Anne Folkes, who worked actively for the American Federation of Hosiery Workers in a strike.

The board said the two women were "conspicuous and outstanding in their use of offensive and opprobrious epithets" toward nonstriking employes.

It said it does not "condone the use of abusive and intemperate language," but ruled it "must be regarded as an integral and separate part of their concerted activity for which the act affords them protection," the board said.

After the strike, tre insulted employes refused to work with them, and the company asked the two to remain away until the situation cooled off.

The board said that was "tantamount to allowing the protesting employes full sway over the company's power to employ." It found that the company had engaged in anti-union activity.

Court Upholds Sound Truck Campaigning

It's all right to use sound trucks on Alexandria streets, Alexandria Police Court Judge James B. Duncan ruled yesterday.

Ruling the city's two sound truck ordinances unconstitutional, Judge Duncan freed Daniel J. Cronin, who was arrested Thursday for campaigning with a loudspeaker for Virginia Democratic Senatorial Candidate James P. Hart.

Hart, who branded the arrest a "prearranged plan" of the Byrd-Tuck machine, did not appear at Cronin's hearing, having left Alexandria to be with his wife who is expecting triplets in a Roanoke hospital.

The Alexandria ordinances ruled out by Judge Duncan required persons desiring to use sound equipment to obtain a license from the commissioner of revenue and also a permit from the city manager.

Cronin, a Roanoke city councilman, freely admitted he used the sound equipment, an amplifier hooked up to a bus, in the city.

Judge Duncan based his ruling the two ordinances are unconstitutional on a Supreme Court decision last June in the case of Saia vs. People of New York. In this case, the Supreme Court held by a 5-to-4 decision that the city of Lockport, N. Y., could not require a Jehovah's Witness to obtain a permit to use a loudspeaker in a public park. The high court, however, did rule that Lockport may regulate the time and place where amplifiers may be used.

No defense testimony was presented at the hearing. After presentation of the city's case, Henry H. Fowler, Washington attorney associated with Walter I. Young of Alexandria in Cronin's defense, moved for dismissal of the case. Judge Duncan granted the motion.

Truman Renames Judge Fennell to Municipal Court

President Truman yesterday reappointed Associate Judge Aubrey B. Fennell to the Municipal Court and sent his name to the Senate for confirmation.

The Senate leadership already has taken the stand that no appointments will be confirmed during this special session.

However, under the terms of the law by which the local Police and Municipal Courts were consolidated in the summer of 1942, Judge Fennell continues to serve and draw his $9975 a year pay until a successor is named and has been qualified.

The father of seven children, Judge Fennell lives at 1843 Lamont st. nw.

Major Pleads Innocent in Son Beating

Maj. Franklin G. Hoffman pleaded innocent yesterday in Municipal Court to a charge he was cruel to his 10-year-old son, Andre.

Police have charged that the Army doctor gagged the boy's mouth with adhesive tape Wednesday night in the Hoffman home, 217 Gallatin st. nw., then beat him with an electric cord and locked him in a room.

At yesterday's arraignment, Judge George D. Neilson set bond of $500 for Major Hoffman and continued the case until August 12.

Assistant United States Attorney Robert Short told the court the case is now being considered by the grand jury. The boy and police officers appeared before the grand jury Thursday.

Major Hoffman appeared in court yesterday in civilian attire and flanked by two attorneys, Samuel Beach and Karl Kindleberger.

Major Hoffman was identified in The Washington Post yesterday as a captain. Actually, he holds the permanent rank of captain. However, in his present assignment at the Pentagon in the physical standards division of the Medical Corps, he holds the temporary rank of major.

Meanwhile, the son was being sheltered at the Receiving Home for Children.

Police said Major Hoffman has denied binding and beating Andre. He admits spanking the lad to discipline him for running away from home.

Boy, 3, Badly Hurt In 15-Foot Fall

Three-year-old William Pauley of 1510 Quarles st. ne., yesterday fell 15 feet to the ground from a second-story window of his home. He was admitted to Casualty Hospital with lacerations of the scalp. His condition is serious.

Neighbors reported that he had been playing in the room with several neighborhood children and had accidentally fallen out of the window.

Postlude

Swarthout Looks Tops, Sings Same

By Paul Hume

Well, there was Gladys Swarthout and there was Howard Mitchell. Between them, they closed the Watergate symphony concert with bursts of exciting music.

Swarthout, looking her most radiant, drew a crowd that filled every seat and spilled over onto surrounding acres. Her singing, from every point within reach of the amplification system, was wonderfully alive and of velvet smoothness.

Arias by Cilea and Saint-Saens, and songs from half a dozen composers brought thunderous cheers from the crowd. It was all too wonderful, but for me that waltz by Francis Poulenc is one of the most intoxicating bits of sound in the world. The soloist repeated it, and the orchestra played the spots off it. The Cilea aria, with its touching spoken recitative was thrilling and makes us wish for more of the opera.

Mitchell took his players through a sparkling reading of Prokofieff's Classical Symphony. Tempos were of a kind to highlight the real contour of the melodies, and the orchestra responded in astounding style. Right now we bow with gratitude to the men and women who have played such a fine series of concerts this month. They have done consistently remarkable work.

Finlandia, a Cinderella sketch, and Jerome Kern's Showboat music rounded out a light program. For encores, a Sousa march, a touch of Gershwin, and it was over. But we shall long remember the genuine pleasure and musical satisfaction offered us all month by Howard Mitchell and the summer concerts.

Thanks again to the Board of Trade and the symphony office and all who made possible the finest music we have heard in a Washington July.

Two Regional Projects Are Under Study

Plans for the proposed Monticello Memorial Highway and a regional sewage treatment plant for northern Virginia are being studied by the Northern Virginia Regional Planning Commission.

Both proposals were referred to committees for study by the newly formed commission at its organizational meeting held Thursday night in Fairfax.

The highway proposal, which would extend from near Washington to Thomas Jefferson's home in Charlottesville, has been indorsed by county supervisors of both Fairfax and Prince William Counties. None of the northern Virginia counties belonging to the commission, except Arlington, has a sewerage disposal plant.

The commission also appointed eight committees to "deal with problems as they arise. The committees are highways and transportation, water supply and sanitation, regional jails and prison farms, regional parks, schools, hospitals and health, finance.

Next meeting of the commission will be September 23.

Americans Fall Flat First Day of Olympic Games

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THUS FAR THE Variety Club's charity fight show at Griffith Stadium on August 9 has been featured by the variety of excuses of Ezzard Charles, who is displaying a great reluctance to advance into the same ring with Jimmy Bivins. Successively, Charles has asked postponements on account of a hip injury, a lame back, a gland affliction and now he complains he is in the hands of an orthopedic surgeon.

POVICH

So he wants out of the August 9 date, which already represents one week's postponement, and suggests the fight be held on August 23 or August 30, two Griffith Stadium dates that are not available. It may not be too much to assume that Mr. Jake Mintz, manager of Charles, was aware that he was selecting a couple of unavailable dates.

Anyway, the District Boxing Commission is summoning the celebrated patient, Charles, and his manager, to Washington for an examination on Monday, accompanied by the threat that Charles may be banned in all 38 States affiliated with the National Boxing Association. If commission doctors do not see eye to eye with Charles' own physician in Cincinnati, that is. At this point they're skeptical about the Cincinnati heavyweight's epidemic of afflictions.

CHARLES' AILMENTS may have been induced by Mintz's sudden realization that he has made a bad match for his man in booking him with Bivins without a guarantee. Bivins is far from a pushover, and the heavyweight picture has changed completely in the last week which saw Gus Lesnevich removed from the contending lists and Charles now rated as the top challenger for Joe Louis' title.

Mintz's man, who knocked out Bivins in their last fight, was under no compulsion to fight him again to retain his own high rating. Now with Charles in high demand by the Twentieth Century Sporting Club following the elimination of Lesnevich, the fight with Bivins represents peanuts in contrast to the gate Charles could draw with Bivins or anybody else in New York.

There is evidence that Mintz is under pressure from New York to pull out of the fight here. The Twentieth Century people have a Yankee Stadium date in September and without Lesnevich they have no fight to fill it. In the view of the Twentieth Century, it's a crying shame to waste a Charles fight in Washington.

CHARLES' NEWEST affliction, whatever it is, was rather sudden. I have a letter from Manager Mintz dated July 28, in which he writes "I am happy to report to you that my fighter looked great yesterday and also this afternoon, and there is nothing to worry about. He will be in great shape for the Bivins fight." Two days later Mintz tells the District Commission Charles can't fight for three weeks.

Mintz denies that he is attempting a run-out, and points out that Charles had to ask a postponement of his Elmer Ray fight in Chicago because of the same affliction, before finally going through with it. He adds "I also realize what a dangerous match he has with Bivins, but regardless I made a deal whether it is a bad one or a good one and we will stand by it."

But with his request for a two-three week postponement, Mintz is making it too difficult for the Variety Club to obtain a stadium date, and his request may serve the same purpose as a run-out without drawing down on his fighter the wrath of the N. B. A.

IF THE DISTRICT Boxing Commission doctors submit that Charles' ailments are not serious enough to postpone the fight and Mintz's man goes through with it, then the Variety Club has a show that has suddenly assumed new importance in the heavyweight scheme. It's a show of more national importance than any since the Joe Louis-Buddy Baer fight of 1941.

Out of the Washington fight would emerge the undisputed No. 1 contender for the vacant title. Charles could bolster his claim to that spot by disposing of Bivins, and if Bivins were the winner he would skyrocket to the top. Bivins would have a victory over the man whom Joe Louis himself recently called the outstanding contender.

For the Variety Club, it had been stacking up as a whale of a show. Advance sales were stimulated after Lesnevich's defeat in England. It was promising to gross near to a $100,000 gate. If the Variety Club loses the show, the painful irony of it could be that it contracted for a fight that was too big and too attractive to be staged in Washington.

Commission Gets Tough:

Charles Seeks New Delay, Ordered to D. C. for Exam

A second postponement of the Ezzard Charles-Jimmy Bivins heavyweight "elimination" bout was in the wind yesterday as a flurry of telegrams passed between the local boxing commission and handlers of Charles.

Charles, it seems, is now under the care of a bone specialist. Last week the Cincinnati belter, considered leading contender for Joe Louis' vacated throne, was granted a postponement from August 2 to August 9 because of a glandular affliction.

As it now stands, Charles has been ordered to appear here Monday, his ailments notwithstanding, to undergo a physical examination by three doctors, Don Knowlton, Leon Gordon and Clark Halstead, of the D. C. Boxing Commission. His demand for a second extension will depend on the doctors' findings.

First information of Charles' latest demands was contained in telegrams from a trainer in Cincinnati, and Manager Jake Mintz in Pittsburgh. The local commission answered each with a demand that Charles show up as ordered on Monday.

Manager Mintz came back with a suggestion that Charles might be ready to fight August 23 or 30, but the commission stuck to its guns. Be here at 1 p. m. Monday, with Charles, it told Mintz, and there the matter rests for the time being.

Commissioner Heinie Miller added a postscript, however.

"If Charles is in condition," he said, "and just refuses to fight Bivins in Washington at this time, it will be a matter for the National Boxing Association to handle. He can be suspended by 65 boxing commissions all over the country. He can still fight in New York, but he can't make a living the rest of his life fighting in New York."

Biscan Helps Out

Scarborough Pitches Nats To 3-2 Win

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

St. Louis, July 30.—The Nats received great relief pitching from Frank Biscan, of the Browns, tonight and defeated St. Louis, 3-2.

The portly lefthander issued three walks in the ninth inning to force in the winning run. His charity enabled Ray Scarborough to cash in a nifty four-hit pitching job for his ninth victory of the year.

For eight innings, Scarborough and Starter Fred Sanford were locked in a peachy pitcher's battle.

With Gil Coan scoring both runs, one on his sixth homer of the season in the first inning, Scarborough had a 2-1 lead on Sanford entering the Brown's part of the eigth. Ray and the Nats came out of it, however, all tied up when the Browns scored their second unearned run.

Biscan Walks Three

Biscan, replacing Sanford, who had been lifted for a pinch-hitter in St. Louis' productive eighth, launched the Nat success by walking Mickey Vernon after Tom McBride had lined out.

Bob Dillinger chose the crisis to bobble Carden Gillenwater's roller and the Nats had a rally going without even hitting the ball out of the infield. Eddie Yost kept the savage Nat offensive alive by working Biscan for a walk also, to load the bases.

Early Wynn, the third Nat pinch batsman of the round, also walked and as he strolled to first, Vernon strolled home with the tie-breaking tally, much to the dismay of the 4343 diehards. A double play helped to kill off further Nat scoring.

For the eight innings he toiled, Sanford gave up only five hits.

His first was Coan's homer, a well-tagged drive which landed atop the right-field pavillion. In the seventh, Coan got his second hit, only a single this time, but an infield out and Eddie Yost's single scored him with the second Nat run.

Brown Runs Unearned

Scarborough, who tonight scored his fourth straight win, was touched for the first Brown run in the third, Yost's bobble of Sanford's grounder, Dillinger's single and Jerry Priddy's force out produring the tally.

The other St. Louis tally, also a gift of the Nats, came in the eighth. With one away, Dillinger singled, stole second and scored as Mark Christman made a two-base wild throw on Al Zarilla's easy grounder.

Scarborough preserved his lead by leaving Rookie Hank Arft on third in the ninth with the run that would have necessitated overtime. Arft singled to open the inning, and advanced to second on Paul Lehner's sacrifice. He held up as Les Moss rolled out, but took third on a wild pitch.

Pinch-hitter Don Lund, whose double beat the Nats in Washington last Sunday, couldn't come through tonight, however, lofting to Christman for the final out.

Tigers Batter Athletics, 17-2

Detroit, July 30 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers staged their biggest scoring spree of the season tonight as they beat the Philadelphia Athletics, 17 to 2, with 17 hits before a night crowd of 45,996 fans.

Six of the Tigers' blows off Joe Coleman, Charles (Bubba) Harris and Carl Scheib were extra-base knocks and three of them were homers, one a grand slam four-run blow by George Kell.

George Vico and Vic Wertz also homered for the Tigers with the bases empty as Detroit put together two big innings parading to the easy victory.

Washington Boys Romp; Newsmen Bow

Former big leagues stars, aiming their big shots at Walter Haight in right field, defeated the newspaper and radio guys, 2-0, last night at Griffith Stadium in a five-hour show staged by the Optimist Club for the benefit of the boys club fund.

The fellows who write it and say it failed to get a man on first base in two innings against Earl Whitehill and Al Schumacher while backed by superb fielding of Bill Werber and company.

After the old cripples were carted off the field, the Boys Clubs of Washington and Allentown, Pa., hooked up and the locals slammed the visitors all over Brother Clark Griffith's lot for an 11-0 victory.

The score by innings:

Allentown	000 000 000— 0 3 3
Washington	000 451 01x—11 11 1

Anne Gray Reaches Finals

Philadelphia, July 30 (AP).—Second-seeded Deborah Welsh, University of Pennsylvania star, and seventh-seeded Mrs. Anne Gray of Washington, D. C., stroked their way into the finals of the Eastern States clay court tennis championships today.

Mrs. Gray, Middle Atlantic titleholder, turned in her second straight upset victory. She eliminated fifth-seeded Betty Taylor, Haddonfield, N. J., 6—3, 6—0.

Brecheen Ends Braves' Streak With 6-2 Win

Boston, July 30 (AP).—Behind the gilt-edged pitching of Harry (the Cat) Brecheen, who had one bad inning when the home forces scored both their runs, the St. Louis Cardinals tonight defeated the Boston Braves, 6-2, before a crowd of 37,071. The triumph snapped a St. Louis losing streak at four games and ended an equally long Boston winning streak.

Wally Ris Equals Record in Olympics 100-Meter Swim

Americans Fall Flat In Olympics

Iowan's Time 57.5 Seconds In Free Style

By Charles A. Grumich

Olympic Pool, Wembley, England, July 30 (AP).—Wally Ris of Iowa forgot all about his throbbing knee and equaled the Olympic record for the 100-meter (109.36-yard) free-style swim tonight after he watched Keith Carter of Purdue beat France's Alex Jany in the other semifinal heat.

Ris, whose knee popped out of joint for four days shortly after his arrival, was clocked at 57.5 seconds, equaling the mark of M. Taguchi of Japan at Berlin in 1936.

Alan Ford, formerly of Yale University, was second to Ris in 57.8 seconds and thus he, Ris and Carter all beat the 57.9 time of the French youngster. Carter's winning time in the first semifinal was 57.6.

Two Hungarians Qualify

The other four places in tomorrow's eight-man final went to a pair of Hungarians named Seilaard and Kadas; P. O. Olssen of Sweden and T. Y. El Gamal of Egypt.

That was all the record-breaking among the men, but in the women's division Nel Van Vliet of Holland pushed the standard for the 200-meter (218.71-yard) breast stroke down to 2:57.4 in her heat after Eva Szekely of Hungary had broken the existing record of 3:01.9 in her trial.

None of the American breast-strokers—Jeanne Wilson of Chicago, Carol Pence of Webster Groves, Mo., and Clara Lamore of Providence, R. I.—could advance beyond the first round.

Ann Curtis Second Fastest

The United States queens, however, did better in the 100-meter free-style where Ann Curtis of San Francisco turned in 1:06.9, the second fastest time of the day.

Brenda Helser, another San Francisco beauty, was third in her heat and her appearance in the semifinal round will depend on a check of times.

Fastest time of the three-session day in this event was 1:06.5 by Denmark's Fritzie Nathanson.

The United States men's springboard trio, as expected, dominated the event in the morning trials. Bruce Harlan of Ohio, was first after the four compulsory dives; Dr. Sammy Lee of Pasadena, Calif., was second and Miller Anderson of Ohio State was fourth.

The dividing competition will be concluded tomorrow.

Mlle. Ostermeyer Saluted

It took Winter some time to recover sufficiently to mount the winner's stand in the infield to receive his reward as the first Australian Olympics winner since 1932. As the Aussies have no official national anthem, the band had to content itself with "Advance Australia Fair."

The first victor of the 1948 games proved to be a pretty French girl, Mlle. M. O. M. Ostermeyer. While the men were running off their heats furiously all around her, she fluffed her hair and threw the discus farther than any of 20 rivals —137 feet 6½ inches. She was the first to stand on the simple white dais and hear her heart pound as the band and the crowd saluted her.

Gentile Cordiale of Italy took second place at 135 feet ½ inch. The two American entries, Frances Kaszubski of Cleveland, Ohio, and Dorothy Dodson of Mundelein, Ill., failed to get the dish out far enough to join the last six qualifiers in the event.

Man From Brooklyn 10th

Their fate was shared, in spades, by Uncle Sam's three entries in the 10,000 meters, which is a long haul of 6 miles, 376 yards. While the vast throng was thrilling to Zatopek's terrific performance, Edward O'Toole of Brooklyn was finishing a modest tenth and Fred Wilt of Anderson, Ind., eleventh. Herman Goffberg of Philadelphia gave it up as a bad job at about the halfway point.

Goffberg had good company in giving up the unequal chase of the flying Czech. Viljo Heino of Finland, who holds the world record of 29:35.4 for the long race, dropped out soon after Zatopek passed him in the third lap. Only about half the starting field of 32 still was chugging wearily around when it ended.

Zatopek also is entered in the 5000 meters, and most of the experts expect him to bring off the double. No other runner—not even Paavo Nurmi—ever has won both the distance events in the Olympics.

Whitfield's Time Best

Of the 24 runners who qualified from six heats in the 800 meters, Mal Whitfield, a staff sergeant in the U. S. Army Air Force, turned in the best time. His 1:52.8 in the final heat gave him the honor over Arthur Wint of Jamaica, who had turned in a fine-looking 1:53.9 in an earlier effort.

Another American hope, Herb Barten of Michigan, won his heat in 1:55.6 while Bob Chambers of U. S. C. scraped in by finishing third in his heat, which was won by Neils Holst Sorensen of Denmark in 1:54.2. The Olympic record is 1:49.8.

The semifinals of the 800 are scheduled tomorrow, with the finals on Monday. Off today's form, it promised to develop into a two-man battle between Whitfield and Wint. The Jamaican, long-legged, free-striding runner, looked like a distinct threat in running over his field today.

Dillard Runs Well

Ingvar Bengtsson of Sweden finished a close second to Whitfield, but the American took it easy in the stretch and had no difficulty passing the Swede just before they reached the wire.

If any doubt remained that Dillard is out to make up for his tragic failure to qualify in the hurdles, he removed them by his two flashing runs today. The Baldwin-Wallace star looked like the fastest starter in the 100-meter field, and he kept plenty of daylight between him and his five rivals in both his heats.

Matmen Off To Good Start

London, July 30 (AP).—Henry Wittenberg, New York's wrestling cop, got no better than a decision tonight as he started his campaign for the 191-pound Olympic mat crown.

Wittenberg defeated R. L. Mekavan of Finland. Despite his victory he received one black mark for not pinning his foe. Two were charged against the Finn for losing. Under the Olympic plan a wrestler is eliminated upon receipt of his fifth black mark.

Leland G. Merrill, jr., of Milltown, N. J., had a rugged welterweight match with Harry Peace of Canada before winning the decision.

Marx Defeats Hardesty, 6 to 4

The Marx Jewelers gained first place in the Capital City Junior League yesterday with a 6-4 victory over the Hardesty team. Houston hit a home run, double and single for Marx, with Brightman pitching six-hit ball.

Yanks Romp In Basketball

London, July 30 (AP).—America's heavily favored basketball forces overwhelmed Switzerland, 86 to 21, in their opening Olympic test today but Coach Omar (Bud) Browning complained "we didn't look so hot."

The Czechs, European champions and the chief threat of the United States in the prelims, had a tough time with Peru in a close game but survived, 38 to 30.

Uruguay, the champion of South America, trounced Great Britain, 69 to 17.

Other results:

The Philippines defeated Iraq, 102 to 30.

Korea defeated Belgium, 29 to 27.

Brazil defeated Hungary, 45 to 41, in an overtime tilt.

One on the Aisle—

So They Paraded A Pack of Stars

By Richard L. Coe

THE KINDEST THING one can say about "On Our Merry Way," at the Palace, is that the actors must have had more fun making it than we lesser mortals will glean from watching it.

The unkindest thing one can say about this star-packed picture is that its coproducer is Benedict Bogeaus, whose last handiwork in these parts was that sticky little horror, "Christmas Eve." His entry in this year's race for the ten worst list shows real promise, though July is a trifle far from the stretch to guarantee anything better than even money.

You would think that such writers as Laurence Stallings, Lou Breslow, Arch Oboler, John O'Hara and, though he's not mentioned in the credits, O. Henry, might provide lively material for a cast that includes Paulette Goddard, Burgess Meredith, James Stewart, Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, Victor Moore, Fred MacMurray, William Demarest, Hugh Herbert, Eduardo Ciannelli and Charles D. Brown.

Such, however, is not the case. The comedy is painfully strained, old gags are exhumed, limp editing has taken away any sense of pace and the overall attempt at whimsey falls flat as Philadelphia on a Dixiecrat.

Whimsey, to be sure, isn't easy to pull off, but why the producers, Bogeaus and Meredith, and the directors, King Vidor and Leslie Fenton, didn't exercise the slightest restraint is hard to imagine. You get the notion they think they're being cute as all get-out, and anyone who thinks he's cute you can have from me on toast.

The story concerns a presumably newly married couple, Meredith and Miss Goddard. He's employed in an anonymous position on a newspaper, but kids her into thinking he's the inquiring reporter, a man so highly regarded that his daily findings occupy the first four columns on page one. I think he thinks she doesn't know the facts, but I'm not sure.

Anyway, he bluffs his way into getting the assignment for the day, using a question his wife has thought up, something about how has a baby influenced you. This leads to three adventures, all of which are equally painful.

One concerns a couple of bandsmen, Stewart and Fonda, whose "Baby" is tall, terrific and a mean one on a horn. The second concerns a movie queen who became noted for something called the sarong, an effort involving Miss Lamour and Vic T'amoore. The third suggests O. Henry's story, "The Ransom of Red Chief," and finds MacMurray and Demarest involved with an obstreperous youngster.

Armed with these trite tales, Meredith impresses his paper with his skill as a reporter, his wife as the gem she always knew he was.

No doubt this could have made an amusing film, but since a picture with such a starry lineup is bound to attract the buying public, laziness overtook all concerned and very little discipline was exerted to make it jell.

One more thing: in the event you think you've seen all these stars in a picture called "A Miracle Can Happen," you're right. It was released under that title six months ago, but switched its come-on to "On Our Merry Way." People, it seems, thought the miracle had something to do with religion which, at the moment in Hollywood, is included out.

HILLBILLY folks continue their parade . . . Cecil Campbell and his Tennessee Ramblers will be dividing their time next week among three Sidney Lust theaters, at the Marlboro Sunday, at the Drive-In, Beltsville, Wednesday through Friday, and at the Cheverly Saturday . . . The drive-in date, by the way, will be the first time locally one of the auto theaters has gone in for a live act . . . Cecil, it says here, has been coast-to-coast for years on CBS and has made 15 Western flicks . . . Along with the master will be Mickey Newell, Roy Lear and Pat Patterson . . . And tonight's another of Connie B. Gaye's hayseed soirees at Constitution Hall.

"ON OUR MERRY WAY," a United Artist release of Benedict Bogeaus-Burgess Meredith production, directed by King Vidor and Leslie Fenton. Screenplay by Laurence Stallings and Lou Breslow from an original story by Arch Oboler; Stewart-Fonda material by John O'Hara; songs by Skitch Henderson and Donald Kahn, Frank Loesser. Rough, Tough and Unpalatable

'Raw Deal' Shows a Tendency That the Films Might Eschew

"RAW DEAL," Eagle-Lion release, produced by James T. Vaughn. Screen play by Leopold Atlas and John C. Higgins. Photographed by John Alton. Music by Paul Sawtelle. Directed by Anthony Mann. At the Metropolitan.

THE CAST

Joe Sullivan	Dennis O'Keefe
Pat	Claire Trevor
Ann Martin	Marsha Hunt
Fantail	John Ireland
Nick Coyle	Raymond Burr
Spider	Curt Conway
Marcy	Chili Williams

IF YOU'RE planning to crack out of jail, make up your mind about which girl you love before doing so. Any dallying with the question may prove as fatal to you as it does to Dennis O'Keefe in the Metropolitan's "Raw Deal."

This seems to be the most constructive message I can give you from Eagle-Lion studios, which is doing its all these days in what I'm afraid is a trend in crime pictures.

You know the sort of thing—the story about the guy who got a medal for saving a couple of lives at 12, but 15 years later winds up in stir for mixing about with the wrong set. It's all very sad, what can happen to these fine fellows when they're framed by someone in their very own gang, and Eagle-Lion is doing its best to make you wish their escape would succeed and at the same time stay within the regulations laid down by the code.

Gangsters Pall

While all this requires canny balance on the part of the script writers, it does seem to involve one spending a lot of time with tough guys, their guns and their molls.

My objection to them lies largely in their crass dullness. As screen companions they've lost their flush of novelty; one no longer winces when the mobster-boss orders someone done in or tosses a pot of burning brandy on a lady. This vin ordinair of thugdom is flat and unprofitable, however it may prosper at the box office.

In "Raw Deal" O'Keefe springs stir at the start of the picture. Urging him to be patient and await a parole is fine, clean Marsha Hunt. Plotting the break is Claire Trevor, the lady with a past. The break turns into a parade of misfortunes, but in the end our hero, having picked up Marsha and discovered True Love, having vacillated between chucking Claire or doing the Decent Thing by Sticking to Her, faces Life and, for this is the movies, Death.

The production has been done with all the scholarly elan of which the industry is capable, and the performances are tough and crackling from all concerned.

Still one can't help regretting that this cycle seems to have set in. Sheer brutality, however, noble the morale might be, has a way of becoming tasteless. R. L. C.

3 Sentenced To Prison for Fatal Beating

Three teenage boys were sentenced to prison yesterday for manslaughter in the fatal beating of a Culverton, Va., farmer in a sidewalk brawl here.

The farmer, Hamilton Eustace, 66, was mauled when he brushed against a girl to whom the boys were talking in the 1500 block of 9th st. nw. The fight occurred in June, 1947. The victim was hospitalized until he died in May, 1948.

The charge of first-degree murder against the defendants was reduced in District Court.

The sentences imposed by Justice Alexander Holtzoff were:

Willie E. Burke, 17, of 931 Rhode Island ave. nw., two to six years.

Elmore Lawson, jr., 18, of 1542 8th st. nw., two to six years.

Charles P. Pierson, 19, of 507 O st. nw., one to five years.

Leroy Johnson, 21, of 31 P st. ne., was given five to 15 years' imprisonment for assault with intent to rape two girls, aged 6 and 12 years, on June 17.

Henry G. Crawford, 23, of 5243 Karl pl. ne., was given two to 10 years in prison for assault with intent to rob and rape a 28-year-old woman.

In a stolen-auto case against an 18-year-old youth, Justice Holtzoff commented that if the law permitted "it would be proper" to sentence the parents who did not stop the youth from a life of crime.

He is William M. Woodyard, 18, of 1918 Calvert st. nw., given one to three years.

Two numbers writers got jail terms, and a third was placed on probation on charges of operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips. Clarence B. Dandridge, 37, of 1316 22d st. nw., got two to six months in jail, as did Ell Johnson, 49, of 56 Patterson st. ne. Johnson's wife, Louise, 43, was put on probation.

Italian Reds 'Weighing' Revolution

By Barrett McGurn

Rome, July 30 (NYHT).—Luigi Longo, highest ranking Communist now active in Italy, told the House of Deputies calmly tonight that Communists are still weighing the possibility of revolution in Italy.

Longo indicated he has been chosen to replace Moscow-schooled Palmiro Togliatti as head of the 132 Communists in the 570-man House of Deputies.

Togliatti, who is still titular head of Italy's Communists, is expected to be idle for several months while he recuperates from a bullet wound in his left lung.

Longo's speech provoked a furious reply from Italy's Prime Minister, Alcide de Gasperi. He said he doubted civil war will come but that he and his followers if necessary will block the path of the Communists "with our breasts."

Longo withdrew the Communist motion of no confidence in the government because of the "government majority" which had defeated a similiar motion in the upper house.

Newfoundland Canadian

Ottawa, July 30 (AP).—Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced tonight Canada's acceptance of Newfoundland into the Canadian confederation. Newfoundland recently voted in favor of union with Canada.

Ring Gulper May Get Cut In His Bond

Law authorities took steps yesterday to see that Stafford D. Lowry, 20, of 808 Xenia st. se., doesn't get away with a $350 diamond ring he has in his digestive tract.

They placed Lowry under $10,000 bond—which he couldn't make—for robbery of the ring and for sodomy.

The reason, according to Assistant United States Attorney Robert E. Short in Municipal Court is:

"We want to have Lowry around for an investigation. Maybe in a few days we'll let him have a lower bond."

According to police, Joseph R. Cipolari, 24, of 639 S. 20th st., Arlington, picked up Lowry Wednesday and the pair drove to Rock Creek Park. Lowry forced Cipolari to give him his wristwatch and diamond ring, police said.

Cipolari complained to police. Lowry admitted reluctantly that he swallowed the ring. A fluoroscopic examination verified this, it was said.

Cipolari, also charged with sodomy, was placed under $1000 bond.

Pilot Crashes On Railroad Near Laurel, Unhurt

A 20-year-old Plainfield, Conn., pilot planned to return to his home by train yesterday, after his light plane crashed on Baltimore and Ohio railroad tracks just north of Laurel.

The pilot, according to Maryland State police, was Phillip Johnson, who was uninjured. His plane struck a power line and crashed on the railroad's eastbound track, they said.

Flying from Washington to Plainfield, he had landed in a field alongside the track to make a telephone call, police said, and had just taken off again when the crash occurred. Traffic on the eastbound track was held up 15 minutes while the plane wreckage was moved aside by railroad crewmen.

British Survey Forces

London, July 30 (AP).—The chiefs of staff of the Army, Navy and Air Force met at Prime Minister Attlee's residence today, presumably to study British fighting strength in view of the Berlin crisis.

Evacuation Of Airport By MATS Is Planned

Symington Orders Transport Service To Andrews Field; Move by January

Removal of Military Air Transport Service headquarters and operations from National Airport to Andrews Field by about January 1 was predicted yesterday by a MATS spokesman.

Civil Aeronautics Authority officials have long been trying to oust MATS, on grounds that its operations congest the field during instrument weather and hamper development of commercial aviation here.

The move has been ordered by Air Force Secretary Stuart Symington, the MATS spokesman said. It cannot be accomplished until at least November and more likely January, the spokesman said, because the MATS move involves relocation of several other Air Force commands.

Other Moves Required

MATS cannot move to Andrews Field until the Strategic Air Command transfers headquarters from there to Offutt Air Force Base, Omaha. In turn, Offutt must first be vacated by the 10th Air Force, slated to relocate at Stout Air Force Base and Fort Harrison at Indianapolis, the MATS official reported.

After it does move, however, MATS expects to continue operating from National the President's personal plane and special mission flights for "very important persons."

Meanwhile, the controversy over the impact of MATS current operations at the airport continued unabated. Latest development was a charge by Rear Admiral John P. Whitney, USN, vice commander of MATS, that a Board of Trade report urging removal of military operations from National Airport was "not in accordance with the facts."

Crowding Denied

Whitney, in a letter to Leon Chatelain, jr., president of the Board of Trade, denied the board's report that military operations account for 45 per cent of air traffic at National during instrument weather.

The MATS vice commander claimed that only 2.7 per cent of all instrument landings in the Washington area during April, May and June were accounted for by military planes landing at National.

Airport officials, however, maintain that military planes overload National's radio approach system which they often use even for landings at nearby military fields.

The main objection of airport officials is that presence of MATS at National produces an unsuccessful division of authority.

Unemployed Former Major Found Hanged

The body of David A. Wolters, 33-year-old former Army major, was found last night hanging by a woven belt from a water pipe in his basement room at 3419 Wisconsin ave. nw.

A brother-in-law, Barney Mullinax, found the body shortly before 7 p. m. Wolters, who had been living at Mullinax's home "on and off" for two years, did not leave a note, according to the brother-in-law.

Wolters had chatted amiably with Mullinax—"a general conversation about the weather, women, autos and traffic"—only about 15 minutes before Mullinax found him dead.

The dead man was a Signal Corps veteran of the Battle of the Bulge, decorated by French and British governments, Mullinax said.

Wolters had not been employed since his discharge from the Army in the spring of 1945. He had been married about four years and separated one year from his wife, Alberta Wolters of Long Branch, N. J., Mullinax said.

Silver Spring's Queen of Beauty

MISS MARY JANE OWENS, 616 Ritchie ave., Silver Spring, Md., who last night was awarded the "Miss Silver Spring" beauty contest title.

Approximately 2000 persons in the Silver Spring Theater, Colesville rd. and Georgia ave., watched five local girls parade across the stage in bathing suits and saw judges award the title to the red-haired former Montgomery Blair High School student.

Miss Owens became eligible to compete in the "Miss Washington" and "Miss Maryland" contests to be held at a later date. Finalists will take part in the Atlantic City Bathing Beauty Pageant.

A close second was Miss Mary Ellen Harman, 18, of Clarksburg, who recently was crowned "Miss Maryland Firefighter." Judges ruled that if it were possible, Miss Harman should also be allowed to compete in the Washington or Maryland contests.

Officer Upheld

Cameraman Fined Over Accident Row

Manassas, Va., July 30.—Joseph D. Jamieson, Associated Press photographer, today was found guilty of failing to obey a Virginia State trooper's order to leave the scene of a fatal bus-auto collision.

Trial Justice C. Lacey Compton fined Jamieson $20.25 after a heated three-hour hearing in Prince William County Trial Justice Court here.

James Ashby, jr., attorney for Jamieson, said he would appeal.

In giving his verdict, Judge Compton declared that "the question of the right to take pictures" at the accident scene was not involved in the case.

He said the issue was an argument several witnesses said took place between Jamieson, and a brother-in-law of an Arlington man killed.

The accident on route 234 cost the life of Cornelius W. Butler, 44, of 3320 N. 23d rd., Arlington, and injured 23 persons.

Trooper Phil P. Herndon, the State policeman who arrested Jamieson, testified today that Butler's brother-in-law, Jack Compton, 21, had asked Jamieson not to photograph the dead man.

Compton and Herndon said the photographer had argued, and "insisted he was going to take a picture." Jamieson denied the argument.

Herndon said he ordered Jamieson away "principally to prevent a fight with Compton," adding that the photographer was "in my way the whole time so I could not do my job."

Jamieson, a photographer for 25 years and employed on the staff of The Washington Post from 1923-28, said he only wanted to make a picture of the wreck, "not of the body."

He said he had "moved off" at Herndon's order and agreed to wait for a picture. When he climbed a road bank to sight his camera for a later shot, Jamieson testified. Herndon arrested him.

Frank Digges, 120 C. st.ne., testified Jamieson was "right under the officer's feet all the time with a Kodak." Jamieson said he had a Speed Graphic camera.

F. L. Ankers, 32, of 1811 H st. nw., said Jamieson had followed all the trooper's orders and "wasn't underfoot."

Jamieson, who lives at 8504 Garfield st., Bethesda, Md., had his $100 bond continued. Date of the Circuit Court hearing will be set October 4.

Earlier, Judge Compton ordered Harry Allen, 34, driver of the Trailways bus in the accident, held for action of the grand jury on a charge of involuntary manslaughter.

2 Policemen In Shooting Given Delay

Court Continues $2000 Bail Pending Outcome of Miss Kilmer's Condition

Court action against two young Metropolitan police privates held in the accidental shooting of a 20-year-old girl in an after-hours night club was postponed yesterday until September 1.

The case was continued in Municipal Court by Judge George D. Neilson to await the outcome of injuries suffered by the shooting victim, Miss Dorothy Kilmer, 1314 Fairmont st. nw.

The policemen charged with assault with a dangerous weapon in the case are Wayne W. Edmondson, 22, and Roland H. Holifield, 26, both of the Eleventh Precinct.

Suspended by Truscott

They were suspended from the force Thursday night by Inspector Floyd Truscott, acting superintendent while Maj. Robert J. Barrett is on vacation.

In court yesterday, Judge Neilson continued the bond of each man at $2000 despite a request by Assistant United States Attorney that bond be raised to $3000.

Attorney Charles Ford, representing the two men, objected to the higher bond and promised the court he will have the two policemen in court "within 5 minutes" if Miss Kilmer's injuries prove fatal.

Judge Neilson remarked that if the girl does die he will reconsider the Government's request for higher bond.

The near-fatal shooting took place shortly after 4 a. m. Thursday in the Palm Grove Club, 1601 14th st. nw.

According to the story pieced together by police, Edmondson had Holifield's service revolver in his hand and was twirling it playfully and pointing it at Miss Kilmer.

Miss Kilmer protested, "Don't point that at me," police said, and then, a split second later, the revolver was discharged and a bullet struck the girl in the chest.

Because the two policeemen left the club immediately after the shooting, they were not identified until late Thursday afternoon.

Edmondson, a native of Calhoun, Mo., had been a member of the force for less than two months, having been appointed June 1. He lived in Clinton, Md., for 11 years and for the past eight years has lived in the District. His present address is 2210 Shannon pl. se.

Attended Eastern High

He attended Eastern High School here for three years. Before enlisting in the Navy in November, 1944, he had at various times been a carnival roustabout, a bartender and an employe in the dairy department at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

While in the Navy he was a gunner's mate 1-C aboard the USS Zellars, a destroyer, and at times was assigned to shore patrol duty in Norfolk, Boston and overseas.

His examination placed him in the lower third of the civil service register and after his appointment he was given the routine training received by all rookies, one month at the police academy. The training included instruction in the handling of firearms. There has been no previous blot or citation on Edmondson's record as a policeman.

Edmondson said this was the second time he had ever visited the Palm Grove Club. He said he went there because there was no place else to go at that time of night. He said he didn't know why he had fled after the shooting, but admitted he became panicky.

Like Edmondson, Holifield is a Navy veteran and received a month's training at the police academy. A native of Laurel, Miss., he completed two years at Eastern High School. He was a grinding car unit operator before entering the Navy in April, 1942. He served in the Navy until December, 1946.

Holifield, who placed in the upper third of the Civil Service register, was given two weeks special traffic training last year prior to his assignment to a Christmas shopping detail. He received a commendation for his performance with this special detail.

Holifield, who lives at 4000 Ely pl. se., also was commended last April when he discovered a fire in the First Precinct and saved the lives of two persons.

Pay Hike Door Open for 371 On D. C. Rolls

Hope Erased for 516 Other Employes Of the District

The door to pay boosts for 371 Federal agency employes paid by the District still is open, the Comptroller General revealed yesterday in a letter to the Commissioners.

All hope was erased, however, for 516 District employes who are paid in whole or in part with Federal funds, employes of independent boards, and employes paid from District highway and water funds.

The letter, signed by Acting Comptroller General Frank L. Yates, said pay raise rulings for 164 employes at National Capital Parks, 41 at Register of Wills, 61 at Recorder of Deeds, and 5 at Commission of Mental Health still are "under consideration."

Earlier this month, the Comptroller General ruled that 15 employes of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and 134 at National Zoological Park are entitled to the $330-a-year Federal pay raise.

District officials said Thursday they had heard "informally" that the boost also would be granted to National Capital Parks employes, but the official order did not arrive at District Building as expected yesterday.

Agencies considered in the same category are Washington Aqueduct, with 70 employes; National Guard, with 14, and the Probation System, with 16.

Yates said "it is presumed" that officers in such agencies would seek a ruling if there is "doubt" concerning their employes' right to the raise.

Employes are entitled to the raise only if they are not under District control he explained.

The Federal Pay Act, which banned pay boosts for District employes until Congress provides funds to pay them, "makes no exception for those employes 'in or under the municipal government of the District . . .' whose compensation is payable from other than District . . . revenues," he said.

The Commissioners, in a July 20 letter, had asked a ruling on whether employes were eligible for the raise if paid, even in part by funds other than D. C. appropriations.

These included employes working under Social Security Agency and United States Public Health grants, those working for independent boards such as the Boxing Commission, Real Estate Board, Armory Board and District Unemployment Compensation Board, who are paid from fees or earnings of the boards; and those paid from the highway and water funds, to which the Federal Government contributes.

Served Policeman

After-Hours Club Head Fined $300

Six "free" drinks and $4.50 worth of setups, served to a Prince Georges County policeman, added up to a $300 fine in Upper Marlboro Police Court yesterday for the self-styled president of a nearby Maryland after-hours club.

Edward B. DeJulis, about 45, was found guilty of selling liquor without a license after Policeman Charles Perrygo testified he bought liquor across the bar of Club Villa Nova, 3105 Naylor rd., when he visited there in plain clothes in the early morning of July 19.

DeJulis, who said he was president of the club, described the place as a private establishment open to card-bearing members only, but said he let Perrygo in without a card and served him drinks because he considered the policeman a prospective club member. He told Judge Henry O'Neill he gave Perrygo the drinks from his own private bottle and charged the officer only for the setups.

Perrygo said that after receiving the drinks he telephoned a squad of uniformed policemen waiting nearby. About 12 persons in the club were not detained, Perrygo said.

DeJulis' attorney, Ignatius Keane, noted an appeal, and DeJulis was released under $500 bond.

Kauffmann Will Disposes Of $1,239,000

Two Sons Appointed Executors and Get Large Part of Estate

Mrs. Jessie C. Kauffmann, widow of an executive of the Evening Star, left an estate of more than $1,239,000, it was disclosed yesterday.

The will of Mrs. Kauffmann, who died at her home, 1901 24th st. nw., on July 4, was filed for probate in District Court through Attorney George E. Hamilton, jr.

Her late husband was Victor Kauffman, who was treasurer and Sunday editor of the Star until his death in 1941.

Two Sons Chief Heirs

The bulk of the estate was divided among her two sons, Philip C. Kauffmann, former city editor of the Star and now residing in Palm Beach, Fla., and Samuel H. Kauffmann, present vice president, business manager and treasurer of the Star.

Mrs. Kauffmann's one share of the limited number of shares of Star stock was left to Samuel Kauffmann. To compensate for this, the other son receives $50,000 outright.

The two sons were named executors of the estate, but Philip renounced his claim to the position.

Mostly Personal Property

The estate consisted of $91,800 in real estate, and $1,147,200 in personal property.

A granddaughter, Mrs. George Wingfield, jr., of Reno, Nev., receives $10,000. The family jewelry is divided among all grandchildren, and each of the grandsons gets $1000 cash.

Red Cross Surprised by House Gift

A decision on what the chapter will do with the 40-room house awaits the return to Washington of John C. Folger, chairman of the chapter's board of directors, said Nat C. Wilson, chapter manager.

In July, 1947, President Truman signed a bill authorizing the chapter to erect a new headquarters on Federal land in the 2000 block of E st. nw., using at least a million dollars in available Red Cross funds.

"The bequest took us completely by surprise," said Wilson. "All we know about it yet is what we've read in the newspapers. We're overwhelmed by this generous gift."

Wilson said Folger, now vacationing on the West Coast, is due to return here August 23.

Plans for the proposed E st. building, to be three stories high with 30,000 feet of office space, are still in preparation, said Wilson. The National Red Cross was scheduled to provide $700,000 toward the new building, and to get the present chapter building at 1730 E st. nw.

At present, additional space for the chapter is donated by the Corcoran Gallery of Art and the Walsh House.

Rent Increases Recommended for Two Apartments

Rent increases ranging from 7.51 to 9.06 per cent were recommended for 291 units in two Northwest area apartment houses yesterday by Rent Control Examiner James G. Tyson.

The 9.06 per cent boost would affect 180 apartments at The Miramar, 1301 15th st. nw., Tyson said. Monthly rates would go up for one-room-and-bath apartments from $35.50 to $39, for three-room-and-bath units from $69.50 to $75.50, he revealed.

The increase of 7.51 per cent would apply to 101 apartments at South Cathedral Mansions, 2900 Connecticut ave. nw. One-room-and-bath units would go up from $30 to $32.50 a month, he said, and five-room-two-bath apartments from $105 to $112.50.

President Sees His Yacht Crew Rescue 3 Marines

By The Associated Press

Three Marines clinging to an overturned boat in the Potomac River were rescued yesterday by the presidential yacht Williamsburg as President Truman looked on.

The rescue occurred at a point near Quantico, Va., where the river is a mile and a half wide. Nearest land to the marines was half a mile away.

The three were identified in a report made public by the White House as Vernon Pratt, Glen Ridge, N. J.; Gene Begue, Rochester, N. Y., and Wilmer Barton, Lancaster, Pa. All are Hospital apprentices at the Quantico Marine Base Hospital.

The rescued men said that they had been rowing in their small dinghy when a combination of choppy seas, sudden gust of wind and the tide had forced them away from the shore and swamped their boat. They were none the worse for their experience.

President Truman, who had watched from the fantail of the Williamsburg, applauded the rescue as a job well done.

To Discourage Gambling

Bridge Club Probe Launched After Woman Tells of Losses

District License Superintendent Chatham T. Nottingham has launched an investigation of "bridge clubs" here after receiving a complaint that a woman lost approximately $200 at one of the games, he revealed yesterday.

Aims of the investigation are to force legitimate bridge clubs to obtain licenses subject to District regulation and to discourage gambling, he indicated.

Letters have been sent to "23 or 24" bridge club operators, asking them to appear at the license superintendent's office, he said. They will be informed that the D. C. License Act requires that an annual $12 license fee must be paid for any "table, alley or board upon which legitimate games are played" which is operated for public use or private profit.

The complaint, Nottingham revealed, came from a woman who refused to reveal her name but said she was the wife of a Government official.

She said she "had a couple of hours to kill" one day and decided to visit a bridge club, he reported. She paid a 75-cent admission fee and won a few dollars at one-fifth-of-a-cent a point in a game with three persons who were strangers to her and apparently didn't know each other.

Another session was arranged, apparently at her home. This time she lost nearly $200, she told Nottingham.

A number of bridge clubs have been operating unlicensed here for nearly 20 years in private homes or apartment houses, Nottingham revealed. These clubs will be required to obtain certificates of occupancy and licenses or curtail their activities, he said.

Those operating in restricted residential districts also will have to seek the Board of Zoning Adjustment's permission to continue, he indicated.

One operator applied for a license but was turned down because police in the Eighth Precinct found evidence of gambling at the club. The operator has appealed the decision to the Commissioners and will be granted a public hearing August 3, he said.

Majority of the clubs are members of the American Contract Bridge League and charge 50 to 75 cents a player. Some provide duplicate bridge games for players who want to obtain national ratings or improve their play rather than gamble, he said.

But gambling unquestionably is permitted at many clubs, he added. Bridge games have "fallen off" considerably since the investigation began several days ago, he said. One woman, who generally has enough patrons for 10 tables, now is operating only four, he revealed.

Most of the clubs operate in fashionable areas along 16th st., Cathedral and Connecticut aves. nw, and in Georgetown, he said.

Only Mailed Returns Today

D. C. Personal Property Tax Deadline Falls at Midnight

Midnight tonight is the official deadline for filing District personal property tax returns, James L. Martin, assistant assessor, warned yesterday.

Returns filed today, however, will have to be mailed in, he added, because the District Building tax offices will be closed, as usual on Saturday.

Returns postmarked before midnight tonight will beat the deadline and escape the 20 per cent penalty for late filing, he said. The law requires that all returns be notarized.

More than 1000 persons crowded the tax offices yesterday in a last-minute rush to file returns or obtain information. Several dozen bags of mailed-in returns also have been received, and a large quantity is expected in Monday deliveries, Martin said.

He estimated that this year's personal property tax "take" will set an all-time District record of $5,400,000, nearly three times the amount collected in 1941.

"There's no question that the number filed, the value of the property to be taxed, and the amount collected all will exceed any prior year," he said.

Three New Polio Cases Listed In D. C. for 31 Total This Year

Three new cases of infantile paralysis were reported at District hospitals yesterday, bringing to 31 the number of Washington area polio cases recorded this year.

In contrast, the North Carolina State Board of Health yesterday reported receiving 27 new cases for the day, its lowest one-day report of the past two weeks. That increased to 1064 the State's polio total since January 1.

Reported to District health officials as polio patients yesterday were a 24-year-old man of the 3900 block of 8th st. nw.; a 1-year-old girl of the 3800 block of Porter st. nw., and a 12-year-old girl of Route 5, Alexandria, Fairfax County, Va.

Their cases made 13 resident and 18 nonresident infantile paralysis victims admitted to District hospitals this year. Last year's totals up to the same date were three residents and five nonresidents.

A check with local hospitals yesterday showed that no deaths have resulted this year from polio, and that 10 of the 31 patients already have been discharged from hospitals. These included 5 of the 13 resident cases, and five nonresident patients.

Four Killed In Accidents On Highways Near District

Sanitary Board Paymaster Dies As Policeman Son Probes Collision

Two nearby Maryland men died in separate traffic mishaps yesterday, both in the presence of their kin.

Two other persons were killed in a head-on collision of two automobiles on Route 1, 5 miles south of Woodbridge, Va.

The dead included:

Forrest M. Crown, 52, of Derwood, Md., assistant paymaster for the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, whose son, a Montgomery County police officer, routinely checked the auto accident, and recognized its chief victim as his father.

James Edward Smith, 44, tobacco farmer, of Mitchellville, Md., fatally injured when he pitched head first to the macadam roadway of Route 50, near Mitchellville, from a truck operated by his brother. Their father was a passenger in the truck cab.

N. Y. Woman, Brother Killed

Miss Mary White, 24, and her brother, James, 29, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., both killed in the Route 1 smashup in Virginia. Three other passengers in the automobile and a marine in the other car were injured, none seriously.

Crown was injured fatally in a two-car collision on Viers Mill rd., ½-mile east of Rockville, Md., at 7 p. m. He was taken to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, by rescue squad workers, and died in the emergency room 40 minutes later.

His only son, Corpl. Clarence B. Crown, was in a police car nearby with a fellow officer, Pvt. Charles W. Crabb. Coporal Crown contacted the Bethesda police substation and volunteered to investigate the accident reported over police radio.

Didn't Recognize Father

Corporal Crown reached the hospital in time to see the dying man carried in, but did not recognize his father. The victim was battered and semiconscious, and rescue workers had removed his false teeth lest he swallow them.

The police reported to the hospital's emergency room, and spied the victim's plastic, orange belt. Corporal Crown recognized it as one his father had recently bought, then recognized the victim as his father.

"He didn't seem to know he was dying, but I did," Corporal Crown said later. "I asked him how it happened, and he said he didn't know. I asked him if anyone was with him, and he said no. A short time later, he was dead."

Was Church Trustee

The victim's wife, Mrs. Dora R. Crown, arrived at the emergency room at almost the exact minute her husband was pronounced dead. A native of Derwood, the elder Crown was an Army veteran of World War I, and was vice chairman of the board of trustees of Derwood Methodist Church, Faith Chapel. A grandson, Norman William Crown, 10, also survives.

Six occupants of the other vehicle were also taken to Suburban Hospital. Admitted were Walter Lee Plummer, 41, Gaithersburg, Md., identified as the driver; Harry Mullican, 38, and his wife, Mrs. Naomi Mullican, 42, also of Gaithersburg, all with possible internal injuries and lacerations. Treated for minor cuts and bruises were Plummer's wife, Mrs. Cecil Plummer; Robert Ward and Mrs. Mary Ward, his wife, also of Gaithersburg.

In the earlier Maryland fatality, Smith, the farmer, died within 10 minutes after he fell from the truck. Maryland State Trooper J. P. Martinuk said the man lost his balance and toppled from the rear of the truck when its load of groceries and empty tobacco baskets shifted.

Purchased Groceries

Only 10 minutes before the accident, Smith, his brother, Herbert S. Smith, 42, and their father, James Smith, 69, had bought groceries at a Mitchellville store en route home from the Marlboro tobacco marts. The older brother decided to ride in the back of the side-less, stake body truck to keep an eye on the Area News in Brief

Burglar Suspect Caught After Chase

A 21-year-old man who reportedly attempted to enter a house on Blaine st. ne., was caught yesterday after a three-block chase. Four shots were fired by a police officer in pursuit.

The man, identified by police as Irving Freeman, 724 Morton st. nw., was captured at 49th st. and Central ave. ne., by Pvt. Jesse L. Edwards of Fourteenth Precinct Station, who slugged him with his revolver.

Police said Private Edwards and Pvt. Haywood D. Douglass responded in their patrol car to a complaint by Mrs. Esther F. Brown, 4911 Blaine st. ne., at 11:15 yesterday, who said she saw a man trying to break in at nearby 4915 Blaine.

When the officers found Freeman and ordered him to stop, he ran down Sycamore rd. to Central ave. ne., and then toward 49th st. During the chase which followed, Private Douglass fired four shots but stumbled and fell, suffering lacerations to his legs, arms and shoulder.

Private Edwards overtook Freeman and struck him over the head three times with his revolver when, according to the policeman, Freeman drew out a pocket knife.

Freeman was taken to Gallinger Hospital in a patrol wagon, where he was treated for lacerations to his forehead and scalp. He was then taken to Fourteenth Precinct Station and held for investigation.

Silver Spring Flood

A 10-inch water main broke about 1:30 a. m. yesterday at Georgia ave. and Bonifant st. in Silver Spring, flooding the street with an estimated 500,000 gallons of water.

Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission officials said the cause of the break was unknown. Water service was restored about 8 a. m., and repair of the damaged street begun.

Children Need Shoes

Lieut. Col. Walter O. Ulrey, divisional commander of Volunteers of America, Inc., appealed yesterday for 2000 pair of children's discarded shoes for needy youngsters of the District.

All shoes donated to the organization will be reconditioned by disabled war veterans in the Carver Vocational Institute, Inc., Colonel Ulrey said. The shoes will be given free to needy children before they enter school in September.

Clinic Dates Changed

Health Department alcoholic clinic sessions, usually held Monday evenings, will be shifted to Tuesdays, beginning at 5:30 p. m., during August, Dr. Leopold E. Wexberg, director of the Bureau of Mental Hygiene, announced yesterday.

The clinics are held at 1740 Massachusetts ave. nw. Regular Friday afternoon sessions, which begin at 1:30 p. m., will not be affected by the shift, Wexberg said.

Air Fighters to Train

Members of the Air Reserve Fifteenth Fighter Squadron will leave Washington today for a two-week active duty tour at Mitchel Air Force Base, New York, Col. William O. Eareckson, commander of the Air Reserve Training Detachment at Andrews Air Force Base, said yesterday.

The 77-man unit, under the command of Lieut. Col. Robert Hoover, is one of six Air Reserve all-weather fighter squadrons in the Nation. It is the first in Greater Washington to participate in active duty training as a squadron.

Marine Group Meets

The two-day Virginia State convention of the Marine Corps League opened yesterday in Alexandria with more than 100 Marine Corps veterans of Virginia in attendance. Mayor William T. Wilkins welcomed the group at the opening session. The Marines also heard State Commandant C. F. Abernathy report on past, present and future programs of the organization.

Col. Jean Moreau, liaison officer between the corps and former Marines, will address the group this morning.

6 Bound in Robbery

Six Silver Spring youths were held for grand jury action in Upper Marlboro Police Court yesterday in the $5 robbery of a Capitol Heights, Md., gas station attendant last Monday.

The six, all charged with assault and robbery, are Merrell H. Thornton, 24; Lawrence Hyson, 22; William Carter, jr., 21; Charles Edward Wilson, 19; Moses Boyd, jr., 23, and Winston Chum, 18, all of Route 1, Silver Spring. All were released under $1000 bonds shortly after their hearing.

The youths are accused of taking $5 from the cash register of Perry's Garage, 7115 Central ave., after one of them struck an attendant, Armor Macon, 35, with a rock. The six pleaded innocent.

Salvage Discontinued

Goodwill Industries, Washington's workshop for the handicapped, has indefinitely discontinued the collection of newspapers and other paper salvage, the Rev. W. Harnold Snape, director, said yesterday.

Snape said a tremendous flood of salvage paper in recent months has overtaxed the plant's facilities and that increased accumulation would cause a serious fire hazard.

Patients to See Show

Two former circus performers and four trained dogs will give an open-air show for patients at Children's Hospital at 2 p. m. today. In case of rain the show will be held Sunday. Stars of the show will be Sergt. Charles E. Graffins and Miss Emma Raymond, acrobats, and the dogs, who go in for tightrope walking, climbing ladders and sitting at the table.

Miss Breckinridge

Chicago, July 30 (AP).—Miss Sophonisba P. Breckinridge, 82, one of the Nation's pioneer social workers and noted educator, died today in her home of a heart attack.

Miss Breckinridge, professor emeritus in public welfare administration at the University of Chicago, had been in ill health for the past five months.

Miss Breckinridge, a member of a distinguished Kentucky family, had been active in many fields for more than 50 years. She was a lawyer, author, educator, field worker and delegate from the United States to international conferences on social, industrial and economic problems.

William H. Gannett

Augusta, Me., July 30 (U.P.).—William H. Gannett, 94, dean of Maine magazine publishers and founder of the Gannett Publishing Co., died today at Augusta General Hospital where he had been a patient since May 6.

Gannett was nationally known for one of the earliest of his periodicals, Comfort magazine, first in the United States to reach a circulation of one million.

He was father of Guy P. Gannett of Portland, current president of the firm that publishes five Maine newspapers.

He was no relation to Frank E. Gannett, owner of a New York newspaper chain.

Neighbor Accused of Breaking Dog's Leg

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

CASE GOES TO COURT—This three-year-old cocker Spaniel, Cinder, with her leg in a cast, is the center of a cruelty to animals case in Arlington County Court. H. M. Hancock, 1512 North Ohio st., Arlington, Va., is accused by Animal Welfare League on behalf of Mrs. Victor J. Gauzza, 5840 North 14th st., Arlington, Cinder's owner. His case was continued to August 24 in court yesterday. Mrs. Gauzza alleges Hancock knocked the dog off the porch with a 2-by-4 club and then struck it again, breaking its leg. Hancock would make no comment

Funeral Rites For Fineman Set Sunday

Elliott Fineman, 40, of 4615 De Russey pkwy., Chevy Chase, Md., a Washington pharmacist, died at Suburban Hospital Thursday of a heart attack.

A co-owner of the Market Drug Co., 5th st. and Florida ave. ne., Mr. Fineman had been engaged in the drug business since he came to Washington in 1932. He was graduated from the School of Pharmacy at the University of Maryland that year.

A native of Baltimore, he had lived in the District until recently, when he moved to Chevy Chase. He was a member of the Montgomery County Jewish Community Group.

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 a. m. Sunday at the Danzansky funeral home, 3501 14th st. nw. Burial will be in the Hebrew Congregation Cemetery in Baltimore.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Jeannette G. Fineman, a son, Jonas Michael, and a daughter, Mary Elizabeth; four brothers, Arthur, Moses and Dr. Jerome Fineman of Baltimore and Isidor, of Oakland, Calif., and a sister, Mrs. Ben Jaffe of Sharon, Pa.

George Barr Baker

San Francisco, July 30 (AP).—George Barr Baker, 78, former newspaper and magazine worker and one-time Republican Party publicist, died yesterday. He had been ill many years.

Baker began writing as a reporter for the Detroit Tribune in 1895. In 1924 he was director of publicity for the Coolidge campaign and four years later headed a section of the Republican National Committee for the Hoover campaign.

Eugene Higgins

New York, July 29 (AP).—Eugene Higgins, 88, international sportsman once called the wealthiest bachelor in New York, died yesterday in Torquay, England, according to dispatches received here today.

Heir to a carpet manufacturing fortune, Higgins in 1889 sold the business to the Hartford Carpet Co. to devote most of his time to sports. In 1898, his fortune was estimated at 40 million dollars.

TRAFFIC—From Pg. B-1

Four Killed In Accidents

purchases. They were within a half mile of their home when the accident occurred.

In the Virginia fatalities, State troopers said the accident occurred at a curve in the highway. The northbound automobile driven by Miss White collided with a southbound car, injuring Marine Pfc. Leonard H. Birney, 17, Alexandria.

The Marine and three passengers in the White car were admitted to Quantico Marine Hospital for treatment. The others were Thelma M. Hewlin, 28; Ella Mae Hall, 29, and James C. Coley, 18, all of Mount Vernon, N. Y.

Other Traffic Mishaps

Numerous other traffic mishaps were reported yesterday in the District and its environs.

Linwood P. Hosley, 60, pedestrian, 4106 Illinois ave. nw., was injured seriously when struck by a motorcycle in front of 1009 D st. nw., at 4:50 p. m. He was admitted to Emergency Hospital suffering a broken right leg and possible fracture of the right shoulder.

Police charged the motorcyclist with failure to yield the right of way to a pedestrian. He was identified as Rolan E. Pennington, 37, of 669 Anacostia rd. se.

A delivery truck driver and his passenger both suffered head injuries at noon yesterday when their vehicle collided with a dump truck at Eastern ave. and Sligo Mill rd. nw. Police said the dump truck was driven by Edward S. Fawson, 32, of 611 Kenilworth ter. se., who was unhurt.

Driver, Passenger Hurt

Injured were Waverly West, 26, of 4843 Bass st. se., identified as driver of the delivery truck, and his passenger, Benjamin Justice, 25, of 1436 Rock Creek Ford rd. nw. Both were admitted in undetermined condition to Casualty Hospital.

In Fairfax County, three persons were injured in two accidents where cars went off the road and overturned.

About 9 a. m., Robert E. L. Sisk, Route 2, Herndon, Va., and Mary Wagner, 4525 Canal rd. nw., were injured when the car in which they were driving went off the road on Route 604 near the Maderia School.

At Arlington Hospital, Sisk's condition was listed as "undetermined" because of head injuries, and Miss Wagner's condition as "good."

Marine Injured

Marine Pvt. George Long, 22, stationed at the Quantico Marine Base, received head injuries when the Marine Corps station wagon he was driving on Route 1 in Fairfax County near the Prince William County line missed a turn and went off the road. He was admitted to the Naval Hospital at Quantico.

In another Fairfax accident, a truck and car were burned when the truck rammed the car on Route 211, a mile west of Fairfax Circle. The car, driven by George E. Garrison, 3809 M st. nw., had stopped on the highway with a flat tire, police said. The truck, driven by Ralph A. Pickeral, Clinton, Md., came up over a rise and plowed into the car, police said, setting both on fire.

Police charged Garrison with illegal parking, and Pickeral with reckless driving. Their cases were set for August 4 in the county Trial Justice Court. No one was injured.

Elmer Merten, 37, of Pittsburgh, Pa., passenger in a Washington taxicab, was injured at 8:55 a. m. yesterday when he fell from the moving vehicle at 17th and E sts. nw. He told police he slid out when a rear door opened as the cab driver swerved sharply in changing traffic lanes.

Merten was taken to Emergency Hospital. Police identified the cab driver as Norman Lockwood, 47, of 25 5th st. se.

12 Hurt as Bus Hits Pole at Laurel

Laurel, Md., July 30 (AP).—Twelve persons were injured, none believed seriously, today when a Safeway Trails bus with about 15 aboard struck a pole, police reported.

The driver, L. M. Alexander of Berwyn, Md., said he veered from the road to avoid striking a woman. Alexander suffered a head cut.

Warren Hospital said only one person was believed to have been more than slightly injured, Rosalie Radcliffe, Laurel.

The others: W. R. Henry, 3010 Wisconsin ave. nw.; Ida Janet, 30, Arlington Farms, Va.; Donald Benedict, 20, Arlington; Margaret Carey, 55, 1835 K st. nw.; Lieut (jg) Elizabeth Miller, 1735 Riggs rd. nw.

Myrtle W. Small, 64 125 Madison st. nw.; Josie McCovick, 54, 22 Chesapeake st. sw.; Edward J. McCovick, her husband, 45; J. Nickson, 1541 4th st. nw.

Iranian Military Mission Feted at Embassy Party

THE Minister of Iran and Mme. Noury-Esfandiary gave a reception yesterday in honor of the Iranian Military Mission which has been visiting here for over a year. Gen. Abdollah Hedayat, who heads the mission of ten, and Mrs. Hedayat assisted the host and hostess in receiving.

Cocktails were served with a delectable buffet for which the Iranian Embassy is famous. Two long tables were set up, one in the dining room and another on the terrace. Each table was centered with deep roses and white gladioli. There were turkeys and hams, salads, stuffed celery, and cakes with coffee ice cream.

The Minister's brother, Brig. Gen. Hossein Esfandiary, a member of the military mission, was among the guests. Other members of the mission attending the fete were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Ali Moarefi, Maj. and Mrs. Fereydoun Djam, and Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Hossein Moshiri.

The mission came to this country for the purpose of purchasing war surplus materials and it is now going back. When it was here in the spring of 1947, a similar reception was held at the embassy.

Guests at the party yesterday gathered for the most part in the cool garden, where flowers in different shades of orange stood out brightly against a green spruce hedge.

Among the many guests were the Ambassador of Russia, Alexander S. Panyushkin, the Military Attache of Brazil and Mme. Lott, the Military Attache of France and Mme. Mathenet, the Military Attache of Great Britain and Lady Prior-Palmer, the Russian Military Attache and Mme. Galkovsky, the Indian Military Attache and Mme. Chaudhuri, the Turkish Military Attache and Mme. Tulga and the Military Attache of China and Mrs. Pee.

From the State Department came the United States Ambassador designate to India and Mrs. Loy Henderson, former Ambassador to Iran and Mrs. George Allen, Col. and Mrs. Edwin Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Jernegan and former Ambassador and Mrs. Louis Dreyfus.

Miss Wagenet Will Be Bride Of Virginian

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wagenet of Westmoreland Hills, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Herriott Wagenet, to Richard Sternoff-Beyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Sternoff-Beyer of Spring Hill, Fairfax County, Va.

Miss Wagenet attended the National Cathedral School, Washington; the Putney School, Putney, Vt., and was graduated from the University of California. She is a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority, the Prytanean Honor Society and is now assistant to the curator of Oriental Art at the Brooklyn Museum, New York.

Mr. Sternoff-Beyer attended Sidwell Friends School, Washington, and the George School in Pennsylvania. He served with the Ninth Army under Gen. Omar Bradley during the war. After separation from the Army he attended the University of Virginia. He is now with a publishing company in New York and is finishing his studies at Columbia University.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Wartime Director of WAC

Mrs. Westray Battle Boyce, William Leslie, Wed in N. Y.

Mrs. Westray Battle Boyce, wartime colonel and director of the Women's Army Corps, and William Leslie, general manager of the National Bureau of Casualty Underwriters, were married in New York yesterday.

The ceremony was performed at the bride's home by the Rev. L. Richard Mellin of Bloomfield, N. J., Mrs. Thomas P. Delehanty, the bridegroom's daughter, was matron of honor and Miss Westray Battle Boyce, the bride's daughter, was maid of honor. William Leslie, jr., son of the bridegroom, was best man. Mrs. Boyce was given in marriage by her uncle, George Gordon Battle, of New York.

The wedding was attended only by members of the immediate families. Following an extended honeymoon the couple will reside in Scarsdale, N. Y.

The bride is a native of Rocky Mount, N. C., and attended the Women's College of University of North Carolina and Pells Law School in Raleigh. She resigned from a Federal position in Washington in 1942 to join the WAC. She served as WAC staff director in 1943 in the North African theater of operations and when the Army moved into Italy she became WAC staff director for the Mediterranean theater of operations. Upon her return to the United States in 1944, she became the first member of the WAC to be decorated with the Legion of Merit, a reward for service overseas, to which was later added an Oak Leaf Cluster. She was appointed deputy director of the WAC in May 1945, and six weeks later was made director of the Corps. She retired to civilian life in May 1947 and became national field representative of the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults.

Mr. Leslie, a native of California, served during the war as chairman of the Joint Rating Committee for the Government's Comprehensive Insurance Rating Plan.

Rohrbaughs to See New York Air Show

Representative and Mrs. Edward G. Rohrbaugh of West Virginia left yesterday for New York to attend the golden anniversary of the International Air Exposition held in conjunction with the dedication of the New York international airport at Idlewild.

They will be guests of Maj. William O'Dwyer at the Waldorf-Astoria today preceding the dedication ceremony of the airport. During their stay in New York, Representative and Mrs. Rohrbaugh are visiting their son, Edward G. Rohrbaugh, jr., lecturer and magazine writer.

Visit Cape May

Among the Washingtonians who are guests at The Admiral in Cape May, N. J., are Mr. and Mrs. David George Price, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Drake, Mr. and Mrs F. J. Oppegard and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Beacher.

In Bridal Procession

The wedding of Miss Margaret Sue Wickline and George Edmund Tomlinson, both of Washington, took place yesterday afternoon in Arlington Methodist Church, Arlington, Va., with the Rev. Joseph J. Johnston officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Leslie Wickline of Painesville, Ohio, and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Alexander Tomlinson of Gulfport, Miss.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white marquisette over white taffeta with bands of Valencia lace inset in the hooped skirt. Her short veil of tulle was held by a Mary Queen of Scots cap of Valencia lace and she wore mittens of lace and carried white roses and lilies of the valley centered with an orchid.

Miss Helen Moreland of Washington was the bride's only attendant and Samuel A. Tomlinson, jr., of Jackson, Miss., attended his brother as best man. The ushers included Charles Tomlinson of Chattanooga, Tenn., another brother of the bridegroom, and Allen Jones and Albert Kern, both of Knoxville, Tenn.

Following the ceremony the parents of the bride entertained in the reception rooms of the church. Mr. and Mrs. Tomlinson left afterwards for a brief honeymoon at Williamsburg Inn, Williamsburg, Va. They will reside in Arlington. Later in the summer they will take an extended Southern trip, stopping at Mr. Tomlinson's lodge on Norris Lake and visiting his parents in Gulfport.

The bride was graduated from Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa., where she was a member of Alpha Gamma Delta, Kappa Delta Epsilon and Phi Beta Kappa. She served overseas with Red Cross during the war. On her return she served on the staff of Kiplinger Magazine in Washington and more recently was on the editorial staff of the Journal of American Institute of Architects.

Mr. Tomlinson was graduated from University of Mississippi and did graduate work at Texas A. and M. College. He was one of the first engineers with Tennessee Valley Authority working on Norris Dam. He served as an officer with the Marine Corps during the war and since 1946 has been assistant director of Project Planning of United States Bureau of Reclamation in Washington.

Alexander—Bradley

Miss Ethel Laurine Bradley and Jesse Clayton Alexander, jr., were married July 23 in the rectory of St. Francis de Sales Church with the Rev. George L. Gingras officiating at the double ring ceremony. Mrs. Alexander is the daughter of James T. Bradley of Anamosa, Iowa, and the late Mrs. Bradley and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Alexander, sr., of Cabot, Ark.

Given in marriage by Walter Thalen, the bride wore a pale blue eyelet batiste dress, made ballerina length. She wore matching lace mittens and a halo hat of pale blue maline.

Early American . . . . Rehoboth Style

Del Ankers

A REHOBOTH BEACH house the interior of which is beautifully done in Early American style is that of Mrs. J. B. Trew of Washington. Called "Tru-Holm," the house was decorated by Eugene Barnes of Washington and is distinguished by a fine, warm use of color and a general air of comfort and livability. An old-fashioned carriage lamp at the end of the path lights the way of visitors to the white clapboard house among the evergreens.

The grandfather clock in the spacious living room is the keynote to the color scheme throughout the house. The red, green and yellow in the design over the clock face are picked up in colors of chairs, rag rugs and other furnishings.

This upstairs bedroom has one wall of wood paneling, while the others are covered with wallpaper in an Early American cherry picker design. The wing chair beside the fireplace is covered with a mushroom print reproduced from an 18th-century original

Bustles Are In London Style Show

By Geraldine Hill

London, July 30 (U.P.).—The royal family's dressmaker gave a preview today of what the well-dressed blueblood will wear this fall. If he has anything to say about it, all the titled ladies in Britain will wind up with "provocative bustles."

Norman Hartnell, designer to Queen Elizabeth, Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret, presented a whole wardrobeful of royally priced outfits as his contribution to Britain's fall fashion showing.

Hartnell gave titles to some of his creations. The "provocative bustle"—replacing last year's built-in derriere—was the standout feature of black afternoon dresses which he calls "pomp," "pep" and "pert."

He also whipped up a tent-like coat called "Up for the Day."

Other voluminous coats were shown with tweed suits. Little was done to change the usually classic lines of tweeds, but Hartnell put in his two cents by using penny-like buttons on one of the suits.

Hartnell threw out all his hip and shoulder pads when he started designing fall clothes. His entire collection emphasized the new round look, especially through the use of capes.

Tomato red coat and one of mustard green were swathed with fox stoles. A few tulle scarves were offered for those who prefer something lighter on their shoulders, as well as their pocketbooks.

Hartnell always has specialized in evening gowns and he paraded a sparkling selection today. White satin is his specialty this year. He trimmed his gowns with satin roses, seed pearls, velvet and amethysts.

One of the white satins had two bodices, which may be used interchangeably. One was off-the-shoulder, with embroidered blossoms in pink and ruby. The other was a tight-fitting jacket of cherry velveteen. It was embroidered with pink and white lilac sprays.

United Nations Club To Be Entertained At Cafritz Estate

After a record attendance of 163 at the last fortnightly swimming party, the United Nations Club officials are expecting an equally successful function on Sunday when members and guests will be entertained at the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz on Foxhall rd.

The hours are from 2 to 6 with dinner and dancing to follow at the United Nations Club. The host in charge will be Comdr. W. Bradlee Smith, who has invited as hostesses for the evening a group of Baltimore girls who specialize in Latin-American dances.

Between the swimming party and dance Commander Smith and the Ambassador of Paraguay, Dr. Juan Felix Morales, will entertain at dinner for the out-of-town hostesses.

Mrs. Frost, Mrs. McClusky Visit in Colorado

Mrs. Katharine Frost and Mrs. Wade McClusky, who left the middle of June for a western trip, stopped in Denver for the performance of the Denver symphony at Red Rocks on July 23. Igor Stravinsky conducted and his son, Soulima Stravinsky was soloist for the senior Mr. Stravinsky's composition, "The Capriccio."

Mrs. Frost and Mrs. McClusky heard the Metropolitan Opera at Central City and later visited the University of Colorado at Boulder.

They expect to return to Washington by way of Canada on September 10.

Conspiring Against Spastic State

Mother and Child Play Health Game

By Genevieve Reynolds

"WE'RE off to Virginia Beach," Mrs. Amerigo P. Anselmo gayly announces to her winsome 4-year-old daughter, Paula Mary.

Choo, choo, quietly whistles the train as it gathers steam for the journey. The all-aboard signal is followed by a rhythmic chug, chug down the rails.

As pretty, blue-eyed Mrs. Anselmo issues the travel sounds, she holds the hands of Paula Mary. Laughingly Paula Mary begins a slow tread across the living room to the radio in the opposite corner. Occasionally, when the child's steps lag, the tempo is increased by suggesting giant strides.

This is one of many games the mother-daughter team plays daily. Purpose of the little conspiracies between the two is to teach Paula Mary to gain sufficient strength to walk without braces. For the appealing, brown-eyed tot is a spastic.

At birth the alert little tyke suffered a brain injury. That part of the brain which controlled the hand and leg muscles refused to coordinate.

Exercises Are Used

Exercises and scientific techniques plus motherly devotion have changed a helpless beauty into an independent, imaginative little miss. Now she can balance on her two feet to the count of 10, push her doll carriage or go skating. Gliding over the hills on skates to date, however, is purely a light of fancy. For example, Paula Mary's most immediate ambition is to skate like other children. So her mother purchased her a pair of "magic" red shoes which she wears along with weaker braces for sleeping. But as they change from day to night attire petite Paula, who smiles constantly with a poised, secure sense of her achievement, skates as fancily and as rapidly as anyone. Over hill and dale the mother and daughter scoot in their imagination.

On daily walks in the neighborhood, the two conspirators again skate. Each jaunt brings a new story or identification of flowers, animals, a passing motorist.

Quite early, Paula Mary showed disdain and disinterest in routine exercises. She simply wouldn't be bored with them. Intelligent Mrs. Anselmo, who took a fling at school "marming" in New Britain, Conn., before marriage, devised all sorts of fairy tale plots, music and other media to pep up and disguise routine "up down, up down" calisthenics. When the courageous child learned to rise to a sitting position, she was an airplane with widespread wings towering into a cobalt sky.

Rotating exercises are inspired by Tony, the organ-grinder, and his monkey, Peppy. These fictitious characters even provide the tunes, such as "I'm Looking Over a Four Leaf Clover" and "Yankee Doodle."

Games Speed Recovery

While Mary Paula balances herself on her own two feet, assisted by braces, Mrs. Anselmo pretends they are poised on the top of a hill and all sites from the lofty peak are described. Sometimes the hard-working team can see everything. This means the patient can keep her poise through the 10 count.

Two years ago she could neither stand nor hold a toy. Now she can string beads, color pictures and even dry the dishes from her high chair by the kitchen sink.

Progress of the case is under the expert direction of Dr. Winthrop Phelps of Baltimore, who comes to Washington once a month for consultation. He is a consulting member of the Children's Hospital medical staff and maintains his own clinic.

To follow Dr. Phelps' recommendation the mother-daughter team go each week to work with Mrs. Gertrude Bagge, physiotherapist at Children's Hospital. There the Anselmos see other parent-child teams doing the same type of curative, inspirational works.

Whimsical games and fictitious characters not only liven the monotony of precision exercises, they also Paula Mary in her continuing fight for firm, coordinated muscles. That isn't all. Mrs. Anselmo's intelligent, original approach to the problem is inculcating in her child an imagination sensitive to beauty and imagery.

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

WHO'LL win the dish cleaning race, the washer or the wiper? "I" smiles Mrs. Amerigo P. Anselmo. "No, No," chuckles Paula Mary, a 4-year-old spastic, as the mother-daughter team make a game of the thrice daily chore in the Anselmo's kitchen at 4802 Avondale rd., Avondale. Brown-eyed, brown haired Paula Mary wipes the dishes from her highchair, drawn up to the sink. Helping mother not only gives her a sense of usefulness and independence but aids in coordinating and strengthening the hand muscles

About Basement Refurbishing

The motor to our electric refrigerator has been placed in the basement. The copper tubing that connects the motor with the ice box runs along the rafters and sweats, and especially after defrosting the box for a day or so after turning it back on. I want to cover the ceiling with prefabricated panels. Is there any way to stop this water from dripping down? I'm afraid it will ruin my panels if I don't solve this problem first. G. W.

The condensation can be prevented by covering the pipes with wool felt, hair felt or any other similar insulation. The wool felt covering comes with a water-proof lining and canvas covering and would be quite easily applied to the straight stretches of the pipe. If you plan to do the job yourself it will be easier to apply 1 inch thick hair felt to the joints than to use the plastic product used by mechanics who do this work professionally. The hair felt comes in very large pieces, but you can probably buy a cut-off piece which will serve your purpose. The hair felt is cut in strips and wrapped around the pipe and tied securely in place with jute binder twine. Look under "Pipe Covering" in the yellow pages of the telephone book for firms which sell these materials.

The front windshield on my automobile has begun to get cloudy around the edges. Can the spreading of this condition be stopped? S. H.

Cloudiness in windshields is caused by air seeping in between the two layers of which safety glass is made. It seems there is no way to stop this process once it is started, so the only solution is to replace the glass.

The leaves of my dropleaf dining table are supported by metal brackets or arms, each with a spring to keep the arm rigid when the leaf is raised. The springs have broken and I am unable to locate anyone who can furnish and install either new springs or the complete bracket. I. J. B.

There is a hardware store on 14th street which sells metal brackets or leaf supports with a spring. You can reach this store by calling NOrth 6300. In order to get the right length, it would be a good idea to measure the old supports or take one with you when you go to the store.

Will you tell me what is the system of tipping in an informal American plan hotel? H. C. L.

The waiter or waitress is tipped at the end of each week 5 per cent of the week's board, if for one person. A smaller percentage is tipped if the party is large. In addition, the head waiter is tipped from two to five dollars a week, depending upon the service rendered and the size of the party.

I would like to find the words to the poem, "Jacqueline," by Samuel Rogers. I thought maybe you or some of The Washington Post readers might have them available to print. M. A.

I have found that Samuel Rogers was an English poet, but have not been able to locate the poem "Jacqueline." Can any Ask Anne readers help M. A. by sending the poem to "Ask Anne"?

What shade of wall paint, other than buff, do you suggest for the Sunday school room of a church? The woodwork is oak and there is not very much light. They are very tired of buff shades and want something different. L. M.

For a dark Sunday school room, nothing could be nicer than a sunlight yellow. Or, you could use a lovely, light, soft rose color. Whichever color you choose, keep it light and use true colors, not grayed ones, and the children will like it much better.

Is it possible to buy in Washington ready-made slipcovers for Chippendale sofas? J. D. N.

A check with four Washington department stores fails to find one which sells the kind of slipcovers you wish.

Are there any laundries which will not mark clothing and linens with ink if you use woven name tags on each piece? J. D. N.

If you will call the Laundry Dry Cleaning Association of the District of Columbia at District 3422, they will supply you with a list of laundries in the city which use invisible markings.

Can you furnish me with a recipe for a tomato cake? L. P.

TOMATO SOUP CAKE

2 cups flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ cup shortening
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon soda
1 can condensed tomato soup

Measure and sift dry ingredients together. Cream shortening and sugar. Stir soda into soup and add alternately with the dry ingredients to the sugar-shortening mixture. Bake in a 8 inch square pan at 375°F for 30 to 35 minutes.

Can you tell me any good methods for the care of woven chair sets of corn fibers? The chairs are unfinished and the seats have not been treated in any way. An oil and wax finish is to be used on the wooden part of the chairs. D. H. B.

Brush the seats with linseed oil, wiping off all that is not absorbed. This will improve their appearance and make them more resistant to soiling.

Can you advise me as to the best method and materials to use in finishing a modern, light birch dining table, in order to obtain a finish which is light, clear and takes a polish, and which will also resist water, alcohol, etc.? Is there a hard shellac, perhaps mixed with lacquer, which will resist water? P. B. T.

For a light glossy finish which is resistant to water and alcohol use a high grade spar varnish. Alcohol and water can be readily wiped from this finish without affecting it, if done promptly. However, it will be softened if an alcoholic drink is spilled on a cloth covering it and allowed to stand for 30 minutes without being wiped up.

Another finish which is resistant to moisture is boiled linseed oil. This may darken the color a bit and, of course, dries with a luster rather than a high gloss. The shine on this finish can be increased by giving the surface several well-rubbed waxings. If you consider using the linseed oil, it would be wise to apply it to an undersurface first to see how it affects the color. To apply linseed oil, rub it in thoroughly, continue rubbing until no more oil can be removed. Let dry two days and repeat this application until a total of three or four applications have been made. After the last application, let stand two days before applying wax.

ATTENTION, READERS: The combination air-purifier and vacuum cleaner mentioned in yesterday's column sells for less than $100. A typographical error credited the machine with selling for "under $11." For further information about it, call Ordway 2143.

To Be Thin Eat Meals—All Three

By Ida Jean Kain

Granted, a career girl has to eat to keep up her strength. And she feels quite sure it would be no trouble to keep streamlined if she didn't have to earn her bread and butter. If you share this view, you will be interested in this verbatim conversation between a working gal and your dietitian.

"Oh, so you're the one that gives those diets . . . well, I just wish you'd help me do something about my figure! But don't forget I put in a day's work—after all, I have to eat."

"You most certainly do," I agreed. "I suppose you eat a good breakfast every morning?"

"Heavens, no! I never touch breakfast," was the indignant reply. "I'm really not hungry in the morning, so why waste those calories? I have black coffee, sometimes doughnuts or toast—but usually just coffee," she added hastily.

"But you do eat a good lunch?" I probed.

Her reply is typical: "You may not believe it, but actually I do not eat much lunch either—a sandwich and a milk shake. I really e t only one decent meal a day, that's dinner. That's why I can't understand how I could weigh 155 pounds,, or how I could eat less and earn my living.

All right, career gals, let's go scientific for a paragraph and see why excess weight is gained between dinner at night and no breakfast the following morning . . . when the bulk of calories are taken at the end of the day's activities.

We burn our food according to our energy needs. Whatever is eaten in excess of immediate needs is stored. Well, after dinner at night we have no immediate need for a generous supply of calories. So what happens? The extra are stored. Will these calories be put to work the next day? Not as effectively as if they were taken at breakfast, for the simple reason that without breakfast you go in low gear instead of shifting into a high energy output.

The custom of eating three regular meals a day is a good one, for it furnishes food for energy in accordance with our needs. We burn the calories for energy instead of storing them. When meals are eaten at the time we are putting out energy, the calories are much more apt to be burned than when they are taken at the end of the day's work.

Why not give the plan a try . . . divide the calories, taking at least a fourth for breakfast, and a fourth for lunch, and not more than a half for dinner. Too big a lunch can bring on sleepiness,, so you might like to take more of the calories at breakfast. A good breakfast wakes you up! You have something to go on.

Most normal weights eat three good meals a day. Most overweights skip breakfast,, "diet" at lunch and eat an enormous dinner. Take your choice. . . .

A Gay Kitchen

Even if your taste in furnishings is on the dignified side throughout the house go a little haywire in the kitchen and make it cheerful and gay. So many colorful notes are introduced into the modern kitchens and it certainly gives the cook more inspiration to work in such a cheerful atmosphere.

Baby's Hair

When the baldheaded baby starts his first crop of hair it can be strengthened and nourished by rubbing equal quantities of olive and castor oil, slightly warmed, into the scalp before shampooing.

Taffeta Important Fabric

The little black dress, the all-important, ever-wearable faille or taffeta, has a big future this year says the July issue of Charm, the magazine for the business girl. To wear now and on into the fall with equal poise and fashion-rightness, Charm recommends a one-piece dress of lustrous taffeta, jewel-buttoned, the skirt flaring outward from the hips.

Amateur Decorators Ranks Grow

Chicago.—The telephone rang in a big paint store. The caller said:

"I painted my screens and put them in the basement to dry. But they're still wet. Is there anything I can do?"

"Yes," he was told, "open the windows and let the air circulate."

So it goes all day. The amateurs are at work. Men in the trade say more people than ever before are doing their own decorating this year to save money and that "they paint anything up to a two-story house."

Edgar Koretz, president of the Retail Paint and Wallpaper Distributors of America, traces the trend this way:

"During the war there was practically no decorating done in apartment buildings. So the tenants started to do their own painting. They found it was easy and fun."

The clerks ask questions, recommend methods and materials, pass out printed guides and color charts.

Some customers who have neither the time nor the inclination to listen or read get into trouble.

"The worst was a fellow who waved aside all efforts to give him information," Schroeder says. "First he waxed his floor and then he varnished it. At that point he asked us what to do. He had to take it all off. Now he knows wax or polish must be removed before floors, furniture or woodwork are refinished."

They've even got the hang of hanging wallpaper. Prepasted paper and borders make it more simple than it sounds. The paper is measured and cut while dry. Then it is dipped in water and slapped on the walls.

Some stores rent tools but he figures some of them should be operated only by skilled hands.

"We had one fellow who tried to use an electric sanding machine," Schroeder says. "He stood in one spot so long he cut right through the floor and the machine fell into the cellar."

Quick Meals Make Use of Cold Meats

Cold meats mean jiffy meals for you. So when the days turn sizzling hot, and the kitchen is even hotter, keep an eye on the cold meats at the meat counter. Take home the kinds the family like best. They'll save you time, money—and furnish the same food values as steaks, and roast. Here are some Better Homes & Gardens ways to serve these cool meats.

Make cornucopias of slices of old-fashioned loaf. Fold meat circle to form a horn, and fasten with a cocktail pick. Fill cornucopia with potato salad and top with slice of stuffed olive. For another pick-up salad, wrap New England type sausage around spears of cooked asparagus.

Sandwich slices of meat and American cheese together with cream cheese. Use 2 slices of meat and 2 of cheese. Cut into squares; serve on cocktail picks. Spread slices of French bread with braunschweiger; spread the braunschweiger with mustard butter (½ tablespoon mustard, 1 tablespoon butter.) Broil.

Lay circles of summer sausage in the bottom of an oiled ring mold. Fill mold with well seasoned, old-fashioned potato salad. Pack firmly. Chill. Unmold potatoe salad on serving plate. Garnish corners of plate with overlapping meat slices. Tuck a bouquet of parsley and radish roses in center of mold. Each meat slice marks a generous serving of salad.

Hot bolgna is easy to fix. Drop ring into boiling water; turn off heat; cover. Let meat heat 5 to 10 minutes. Cut hot bologna into 3-inch lengths. Arrange around cool potato salad. This makes a quick meal when you're in no mood to spend extra time in the kitchen.

Protection Against Mildew

Leather shoes, belts, handbags, luggage and other leather articles can be protected against mildew in humid summer weather simply by sponging with a 1 per cent solution of paranitrophenol in alcohol, according to Miss Margaret Furry, textile chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture.

This solution, which may be purchased at drug stores, gives the leather protection for two or three months. One precaution should be taken before using it, however, because alcohol changes the color of some leathers. Try it out first on some part of the leather which does not show.

Another chemical which may be used the same way but is not quite so effective is a 1 per cent solution of thymol in alcohol. This also may be purchased at drug stores.

Wax rubbed sparingly on shoes after regular polishing helps keep leather dry and protects against mildew. Soles of shoes often mildew badly. A thin coat of floor wax on soles helps protect against this damage.

Summer Salads

Sliced fresh apricots combined with celery and nutmeats make a delightful summer salad. Serve on shredded salad greens and garnish with mayonnaise.

Slices of cooked frankfurters are a flavorful addition to a potato salad on which mayonnaise is used.

BARNABY

Barnaby, do those actors in the barn know we're doing "Hamlet"? With your Fairy Godfather in the title role?
Huh?
So the second act of "The Peon's Plight" opens on a somber note—
Mr. O'Malley is rehearsing too—
What is that imaginary Fairy Godfather of yours doing, Barnaby? "Hamlet"?
Yes.
Yes, they know, Mr. O'Malley.

Waugh to Study Catholicism Here

NEW YORK.—Evelyn Waugh, the English novelist, is coming here to study America's Roman Catholicism. During his stay he will reside at Loyola University, where he was given an honorary degree . . . Burgess Meredith and Paulette Goddard will open an antique and gift shop at Hyde Park, N. Y. A restaurant and a theater also will be opened there, on the property managed by Elliott Roosevelt, for the million persons a year who visit the place.

John Roosevelt, youngest son of the late President, is opening a store in Beverly Hills on September 1. His partner is Lee Good, and the store will be known as "Roosevelt-Good." They expect this to be the first of a chain of stores throughout Southern California . . . Roosevelt was in the Stork Club one night, where he was asked whether, like his brothers, he intends to interest himself in politics. "No. No," he replied. "My business is running a store. And I don't care WHOM I sell goods to —Republicans OR Democrats."

The political reporters covering Tom Dewey are quartered at the Nelson House in Poughkeepsie. This is the same hotel they used in covering President Roosevelt . . . One night at the Stadium, where Joe DiMaggio got an accidental scratch hit the first time up, Lou Boudreau of the Indians shouted to Toots Shor: "What do you feed him on?" Shor shouted back: "Come into my joint, and I'll show you." Then, with the bases full, DiMaggio hit a home run. After the game, while DiMaggio was supping with Shor, Boudreau walked in and announced: "Okay. Show me."

A. W. Lawrence, the Cambridge professor and brother of Lawrence of Arabia, is coming here to work with Burgess Meredith on writing the film adaptation of Lawrence's "Seven Pillars of Wisdom." Meredith is producing the movie . . . Both Collier's and Esquire are preparing articles on Louis Calhern . . . an important newspaper executive confesses that he never reads the opposition newspapers. "They annoy me, and I don't like to be annoyed," he explained. "I keep remembering something Calvin Coolidge once said to me about Herbert Hoover: 'No wonder he doesn't look as well as I do. He read the opposition papers.'"

Sir Stafford Cripps was discussing the Marshall Plan with some members of Parliament, and urged that Britain seek more of this aid from America. "But there are strings attached to these loans," one M.P. dissented. "It's like having to buy a bottle of rum with every bottle of scotch you purchase" . . . Cripps, a teetotaler, shook his head in bewilderment, and replied: "Gentlemen, you wander far afield. The marketing of bottles and their unique contents are matters with which I frankly am not familiar."

Eleanor Roosevelt will attend the U. N.'s Paris meeting in September. One of Senator Pepper's friends, who was with the Senator from Florida when he had his first glimpse of Hitler's retreat in Berchtesgaden, says that Pepper's sole comment was: "It makes me feel that the only thing lacking in the glorious State of Florida is a mountain."

"In 1938, I saw Hugh Williams, who had come to New York to do a show with Ina Claire, sitting in the Stork Club with Margaret Vyner, the Australian actress," writes Col. (Robbie) Robbins, now in Paris. "They told me an anecdote about their wedding the day before. I passed it on to you, and you printed it. This started the wires burning from London, where Hugh had a perfectly good wife. It had been a gag, and they never dreamed it would see print. Tallulah Bankhead phoned Hugh the next day, said 'Darn, you bigamist, you,' and hung up. In the ensuing 10 years, Hugh was divorced, served in the Army, landed in Normandy and fought through France . . . In Deauville last Saturday I saw them again—Hugh and the same Margaret Vyner. They asked me to tell you again that they are married, but this time it's real. They have two fine sons. And they want you to know that it all began with the Stork Club and your column, 10 years ago."

THE LADIES

If he calls you and you don't want to be bothered, just pretend you don't hear him! If he starts yelling . . . burst into tears, develop a sick headache and go home.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Orange-Crate House

On rainy summer days or in the wintry weather, youngsters can have a lot of fun with a two-story, open-faced doll house made from a couple of orange crates. The four rooms that these divided boxes provide can be connected by doors, which Pop can cut through the partitions, and by make-believe cardboard stairs.

The "Five and Dime" stores sell furniture at reasonable prices, or children can be helped to make their own out of small match boxes, pieces of stiff cardboard and other odds and ends that one finds around any home. Small pieces of wallpaper may be used to dress up the rooms, and if there is some old paint available, the orange-crate house can be made to look very fancy.

Sometimes children like to use more than two boxes, and have a whole apartment house. Here again, Dad or big brother can be called on to help make an elevator of a small box that can be hauled up and down a shaft cut through the boxes. Indeed, there are all sorts of ideas that can be worked out. Fire houses, department stores—there's no end to the possibilities.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

'Headache Boy' Lauds Great Lady

By Drew Pearson

A great lady died the other day—a lady who had caused me much happiness—and much pain.

She was my former mother-in-law, Eleanor Patterson, who used to write about me in such scathing terms that even the very frank Time Magazine had to interpret them with dots and dashes. And although I never answered her, I want to write about her now because she represented a great newspaper cycle which may be coming to an end.

Mrs. Patterson

Cissy Patterson's one ambition was to be as great a newspaperman as her brother Joe, and though she may not have realized it, she was. She and Joe had grown up together, and she worshipped him. That was how Cissy got her nickname; for Joe, as a little boy, could not pronounce "Eleanor."

Both inherited part of the Chicago Tribune—wealthiest newspaper property in the world. But neither was satisfied merely to be a cog in the Tribune machine, and their genius built up two great newspapers in other cities, The New York Daily News and The Washington Times-Herald.

Born of Travail

Cissy Patterson always reminded me of the house on Dupont Circle in which she lived. It was a beautiful house, born of travail. Her mother, bored with Chicago, had moved to Washington and the house was designed by Stanford White before he was shot by Harry K. Thaw.

Cissy had her coming-out party in that house, met and fell in love with a cavalry officer in the Czar's army in that house, married and divorced him, later came back to spend most of her life in that house. Across the street was the ornate mansion of Joe Leiter, another Chicagoan, who once almost cornered the world wheat market. And farther up the avenue were the homes of Alice Roosevelt Longworth, Cissy's close friend and rival; and the Walsh castle, built by Evalyn Walsh McLean's Irish-immigrant father when he "struck it rich."

Coolidge's 'Home'

Cissy's Dupont Circle home was the scene of luxurious parties; hatched conspiracies to kill the League of Nations; served as the official residence of frugal Calvin Coolidge, who moved in with thirty pairs of shoes, half a dozen pairs of hip-boots, an array of flannel nightgowns, and a hundred or so woolen socks, one pair of which was filched by a member of my family and given me as a souvenir.

When Cissy's mother first built 15 Dupont Circle, her sister—the mother of Col. Robert McCormick—chided her that she was building in a swamp. But the restless District of Columbia has now surged far beyond Dupont Circle, surrounding the Patterson home with shops and apartment houses. It still stands, however, a monument to the past. So stood Cissy Patterson's journalism.

Her method of running a newspaper was brilliant, sometimes vitriolic, always personal. It was her newspaper and she ran it as such. There was not a night she did not pass upon its banner headlines and first-page makeup. Even when in Florida she checked this by telephone.

'The Headache Boy'

Frequently the first page featured headlines about "the headache boy"—Cissy's description of her former son-in-law. Not only did she play up every speech attacking me on the Senate floor, but she kept a file and at times a ghost-writer to help Senators write those speeches.

And today, Senator Brewster of Maine has his office stacked high with 75,000 reprints of a speech largely taken from Cissy's past diatribes against "the headache boy," which he is mailing out to constituents at the taxpayers' expense.

People used to ask me why I didn't answer Cissy or sue her for libel. I didn't partly because she and I had been through a lot together, partly because I have come to the conclusion that the American public is the best judge of these things and will eventually decide that a man is what he is, not what someone else says he is.

That was the chief trouble with Cissy's journalism. It defeated its own ends. She did not seem to realize that great wealth and power, used wantonly, destroy themselves. That is why I say her type of journalism may be somewhat like her beautiful house on Dupont Circle—a landmark that is passing.

For more and more publishers, especially where they enjoy a news monopoly, have come to realize their obligation to give fair and dispassionate news. Editorial opinion is carried on the editorial page or in the syndicated columns, but less and less in the news columns. The Washington Post, for instance, has just become a public-service newspaper.

The Chicago Tribune, a great personal paper, will continue to make a fortune, but it will not influence its readers. Not for years has it won an election in Chicago, and probably won't until it quits being the personal mouthpiece of Colonel McCormick.

Overcome The Causes of Baldness—ACT NOW!

R. W. PLASTERER
Trichologist

Washington, July 31, 1948. You don't have to accept baldness. Scientists agree that if your scalp is properly treated when the first signs of approaching baldness appear, you can save your hair. You will surely become bald, however, if you ignore increased hair fall, itching, dandruff, excessive dryness or oiliness. These are the first symptoms that your hair needs attention and when you notice them you should visit the Hair and Scalp Clinic for a Free, Private Examination. They will tell you exactly what can be done for your hair, how long it will take and what the reasonable cost will be. If you are accepted for treatment, modern scientific methods will eliminate the causes of your hair loss, your hair will thicken, your scalp will feel healthy and alive. The appearance of your hair will improve, and you will learn how to care for your hair—how to keep it healthy and strong. Come in today for your Free Examination. Portraits

By James J. Metcalfe

Is It Worthwhile?

We go along from day to day . . . To find a tear or smile . . . And wonder whether after all . . . This life is worth our while . . . We see so many tragedies . . . That happen here and there . . . And sufferings that seem much more . . . Than anyone can bear . . . And there are times when we ourselves . . . Are faced with problems great . . . And we must have the human strength . . . To bear our sorrow's weight . . . And yet we know that there is bound . . . To be a brighter dawn . . . If we just have the courage and . . . The will to carry on . . . We know that we can conquer fear . . . If only we will try . . . And every now and then there is . . . A rainbow in the sky.
